Vestas start threatening to pull plug on jobs plan once again

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

WIND turbine giant Vestas has once again threatened to pull the plug on its plans to create 2,000 jobs on Sheppey, unless it receives assurances over the UK's future energy policy.

Just weeks after putting in a planning application to transform a 70-hectare site in Sheerness into a major manufacturing facility, the firm says without a guarantee the demand will be there, it could just walk away.

Any such move would come as a huge blow to the local economy, which is already reeling after the collapse of Thamesteel in January and the loss of 350 jobs.

But council chiefs insist the Vestas threat is hot air, and that the ambitious plans will go ahead.

A spokeswoman for the Danish firm said it was essential the company saw an "order pipeline" from customers before moving forward with the plans.

The latest development follows fears over the Government's commitment to wind energy, sparked by a letter signed by 100 Tory MPs – including five from Kent – calling for on-shore wind subsidies to be cut.

They argued on-shore wind farms were "inefficient" and a blight on the countryside, and that it was unfair for taxpayers to be burdened with the cost.

Although the proposed Sheerness plant would serve the off-shore wind industry – which is believed to be more efficient than on-shore – the company has stressed the need for assurance on the long-term energy policy for the UK.

FARMING

Lamb virus hits our farms

A VIRUS spread by mosquitoes and causing lambs to be born deformed or still-born has hit farms in Swale. While the National Farmers' Union is stressing the illness presents no threat to humans, nor is it contagious to other animals, farmers are being left to cope with the issue.

INDUSTRY

Wind turbine firm will stay away if orders not forthcoming

Systems, Peter Brun, said opponents to wind energy were ignoring the billions of pounds of investment and the thousands of potential jobs to be generated.

He said: "They also ignore the impact increasing oil and gas prices have on energy prices. I think anyone who can see this issue in a balanced way would not share their views."

"We are working with the Government and wider industry to ensure the UK realises the potential of wind resources and the jobs and investment that would come with it."

Helen Miller from Swale Green Party said unless the Government provided stronger support for wind power, more than 2,000 skilled, well-paid jobs could be lost.

"The loss to our area could be immense," she said.

"We ask Swale's MPs, its council and Kent County Council to take action to ensure the Vestas investment in green jobs for Swale goes ahead."

"It is very unhelpful that 100

Conservative MPs are opposing wind power when other options, especially nuclear, have higher long-term costs and do not reduce greenhouse gas emissions."

Chatham and Aylesford MP Tracey Crouch, who signed the letter, said she was not against wind energy, but that technology had to be value for money.

"As MP in a county relatively untouched by onshore wind farms it is very important that we protect residents and taxpayers from more inefficient wind farms, which also blight the countryside," she said.

Swale Borough Council leader Andrew Bowles reassured residents the offshore industry was not at risk and that he was confident plans for the Sheerness facility were progressing.

"The main controversy at the moment surrounds the impact on the landscape of on-shore wind turbines," he said.

"This does not apply to the planning application that has been submitted to Swale Borough Council and which is currently being considered."

"We welcome the Prime Minister's statement that wind power needs to be part of any future energy strategy and while we still have planning processes to go through and Vestas will need to make their own decisions around the expansion of their business, we remain very confident that the plans are progressing and that real investment will be coming to the island."

The proposed industry at Sheerness would be a dedicated facility producing off-shore wind turbines for the southern North Sea.

EDUCATION

School children are encouraged to reach for the stars by fun roadshow

By Chris Murphy

yourswale@kosmedia.co.uk

PRIMARY school pupils across Swale will soon get the chance to simulate space travel as an innovative roadshow blasts off.

Spacefund is a theatre organisation set up by husband and wife space fans Jo and Matt Fox, from Canterbury.

They are visiting 15 primary schools in the Swale area to teach youngsters about space travel, and what it means to have walked on the moon.

Mrs Fox said: "Few subjects have as much impact as space to inspire interest in the young. For example, a 2009 survey carried out for Sky television, sampled 3,000 children by asking their parents what they wanted to do when they grow up."

"It found nine per cent of children want to become an astronaut – the fourth most popular choice of profession, after famous footballer, famous popstar and famous actor."

"It's clear that space remains a fascinating subject for children, and acts as a gateway to further science learning."

INSPIRATIONAL: Spacefund encourages and inspires more children to learn science

"The Kids in Space Science Show is designed to stimulate that interest. We strongly believe when engaging young people inspiration must come hand in hand with education."

"Plutarch famously wrote, 'The mind is not a vessel to be filled, but a fire to be lit', and when Spacefund perform to young people we see ourselves very much in the role of firestarters."

"The Kids in Space show is not a lesson or a lecture, it is very much a dramatic performance – with comedy, excitement and colourful props."

"It is centred around education and the National Curriculum, but the approach is learning through fun with lots of interaction with the audience. Since we launched 12 years ago Kids in Space has been seen by more than 95,000 children."

"The information presented in the show and additional free learning materials is constantly being refined to keep up with the exciting pace of change within space science and encourages awareness and engagement with the UK Space programme."

It is thought more than 2,000 children will get to experience the tour as it hits Swale.

The schools next on the list are Halfway Houses Primary School, Herne Hill CofE Primary School, Lansdowne Primary School, Eastchurch All Saints Primary School, West Minster Primary, Queenborough Primary School, Bobbing Village School, Minster in Sheppey Primary School, Murston Infants School, Bysing Wood Primary School, Iwade Primary School, Minterne Junior School, and the South Avenue Infant and Junior schools in Sittingbourne.

See www.spacefund.co.uk for more information about the show.

CHARITY

From funnyman to hero, we flock to cheer on John's amazing effort

By Chris Britcher

chris.britcher@archant.co.uk

IT'S a long way from the stand-up routines and cosy TV studios he is used to – but for John Bishop, who ran through Swale as part of a remarkable feat of physical endurance, this was no normal week.

Dubbed his "week of hell", the Liverpoolian was mobbed by well-wishers as his incredible charity effort arrived in Faversham on Wednesday afternoon – then set off again on Thursday morning, with him hitting the streets of the borough cheered on by thousands lining the route.

In an effort to raise more than £1million for Sport Relief, Mr Bishop, 45, started in Paris with a 185-mile cycle ride.

No sooner had he finished that, he rowed 26-miles across the English Channel – cheered on by celebrity chums such as cricketer Andrew 'Freddie' Flintoff, TV star Davina McCall, and athlete Denise Lewis who joined him in the boat – before arriving on the beach at Dover on Tuesday evening.

Having stayed in the town overnight, he then set off on a 26.4-mile marathon to Faversham.

And there he was greeted at the Guildhall after being joined by the likes of Dermott O'Leary and BBC Radio One Breakfast Show star 'Comedy' Dave Vitty en route.

An exhausted Bishop said, on arriving in Faversham: "I had tears in my eyes when I saw the crowds waiting for me. It's been a great journey so far and the people cheering me on have been fantastic."

WELCOME: John Bishop greets well-wishers lining his route into Faversham before heading towards Sittingbourne on Thursday

After an afternoon relaxing, Mr Bishop started his second marathon on Thursday morning – running down the A2 through the villages and Sittingbourne – en route to Gravesend.

He is expected to complete his journey into London today (Friday).

His aim is to raise enough money to vaccinate 250,000 children in Africa against five deadly diseases. Each vaccine costs £5.

To donate money in support of John Bishop visit www.sportrelief.com/donate/john-bishop.

A documentary detailing his remarkable effort will be broadcast on the BBC prior to Sport Relief weekend, which this year takes place on March 23-25.

One of the major fundraisers for this year's event will be the Sainsbury's Sport Relief Mile. The nearest of which takes place at Farming World, just outside Faversham, on March 25. To take part, see the www.sportrelief.com website.

NEWS IN BRIEF

➔ Olympic Stadium first

SHEPPEY runner Ian West will be one of the first ever competitors to cross the finish line at the Olympic Stadium after being randomly selected from almost 43,000 hopeful ballot entries to claim a place in The National Lottery Olympic Park Run on March 31.

Mr West said: "I'm more of a casual runner than anything else but to get the chance to run inside the Olympic Stadium will be fantastic. It's a once in a lifetime opportunity."

➔ Thamesteel food aid

FORMER Thamesteel workers in Sheerness have benefitted from more than 3,500 meals provided through food boxes, just a little over a week since the service started.

Organised by Children & Families Ltd, the charity which operates the Family Food Bank, the food parcels have been handed out at the Seashells Children's Centre.

Some 350 lost their job when the steel firm collapsed.

➔ Schools in demand

CHILDREN discovered this week the secondary school places they have been offered for September – with schools in Sittingbourne among the most oversubscribed in the county.

Fulston Manor and Westlands were among the top ten most oversubscribed schools. Parents received an email on Thursday, or a letter through the post today (Friday) informing them of which school their youngster will join ready for the new academic year.

Kent County Council said just over eight of ten youngsters will have got their first choice.

TRAVEL

Public vote against development of Thames Gateway airport ideas

A MAJOR opinion poll says the public would prefer to see a third runway built at Heathrow – rather than a giant new international airport built in the Thames Estuary.

The findings of the ICM poll support the views of both Swale Borough Council and Kent County Council – both of which are strongly opposed to the controversial proposals, championed by London Mayor Boris Johnson, to site an airport either on land on Grain or on reclaimed land in the estuary – the so-called Boris Island suggestion.

Should either get the go-ahead following a major consultation process this year, it would dramatically blight the lives of those living on Sheppey – and the rest of Swale.

But the ICM poll, commissioned by the Institution of Mechanical Engineers, suggests the public would rather see existing facilities expanded.

The poll of 1,001 members of the general public showed a third runway at Heathrow was favoured by 25 per cent of respondents, with 21 per cent

NO GO: An opinion poll shows people would prefer a third runway at Heathrow to the creation of a new airport such as this design for Grain, by Lord Foster backing the new airport. When asked if they believed the Government was right to block Heathrow's third runway, 35 per cent agreed while 32 per cent thought it was wrong.

Philippa Oldham, head of transport at the Institution of Mechanical Engineers, said: "Heathrow, Britain's only hub airport, is heading for a capacity crunch which could cause lasting damage to the economy and cost the UK thousands of jobs.

"However the Thames Estuary airport is not the solution, as it would be an expensive, impractical and – as this poll reveals – unpopular white elephant. The Government needs to urgently rethink its decision to rule out any potential expansion at Heathrow, Gatwick or Stansted, which all offer more sensible and cost-effective alternatives.

"We need a clear vision on what UK air capacity should be in ten years' time. This needs to be backed up by a stringent cost-benefit analysis that takes into account provincial airports as well as those in the south east."

FARMING

Farmers baffled by random pattern of the deadly virus killing our lambs

By Chris Murphy

yourswale@kosmedia.co.uk

SHEEP farmers are facing up to the realities of another major blow to their business after confirmed cases of the Schmallenberg virus on Swale farms.

The virus is believed to have been carried from Germany by a swarm of mosquitoes in October. They then infected pregnant sheep. The bug then damages the unborn lamb – causing either death or deformities.

There have been more than 80 confirmed cases in the UK – mainly along the east and south coast. Kent figures number more than a dozen.

However, farmer Jeremy Metianu, from Eastling, which has seen his livestock hit, admits it is difficult to track the virus' progress.

Mr Metianu, who judges sheep for the Kent County Agricultural Society, said: "We have had some birth defects.

"It is most peculiar. We only lamb a small number as we have a small pedigree flock. We have 20 ewes, ten of which we put to ram, and ten we had artificially inseminated (AI) a week later.

"Out of ten which went to the rams, three ewes produced deformed lambs, and of the ones that were AI-ed they were all perfectly okay.

"Out of the three ewes that had badly deformed lambs, two of them went to the veterinary investigation centre, and they were both confirmed as Schmallenberg on visible post mortems. But when they did the test on the brains, they said one was and one wasn't, so how that works out I just don't know."

He added: "We also had triplets and found two of the lambs were okay, and one of them was horribly deformed.

"It is very odd – you would think that if they'd got it, they'd got it, and if they hadn't they hadn't.

"This is all very new to this country. Until we started lambing, we had no idea the ewes had it. The ewes look perfectly normal until they lamb and then you get lambing problems."

Dr Dan Tucker, from Cambridge University said a vaccine could be two years away. He has a theory that once sheep have been infected once, they could develop an immunity.

Mr Metianu adds: "With foot and mouth, blue tongue and now this, it has been a terrible ten years. We have stumbled from one thing to another."

Meanwhile, the National Farmers' Union is hammering home the point the Schmallenberg virus currently affecting sheep across Swale and Britain is not a risk to human health.

But the NFU says the season will be a "tough one".

The NFU is pinning its hope on science.

It said: "This season will prove tough for sheep and cattle farmers coping with Schmallenberg virus, but the NFU is hopeful that science will help to find solutions.

"There is no vaccine for this new midge-borne virus that causes abortions, stillbirths and birth defects in cattle and sheep. In adult cattle it can cause fever, diarrhoea and a decline in milk yields."

The problem with the virus, which gets its name from the German town that first spotted it, has been known for weeks.

DEATH: The virus affects unborn lambs, causing defects and death when they are born

NEWS IN BRIEF

➔ Swap books at Forum

THE Forum is holding a book swap event on Wednesday, March 14.

Shoppers at the Sittingbourne retail complex are invited to bring along any unwanted books for their chance to swap them. Book donations for the event are being taken now. Those wishing to donate need to simply take any unwanted books to the centre manager's office.

The event itself will run from 11am to 4pm. Any books left over will go to charity.

➔ Drama off our coast

LIFEBOAT crews from Sheerness were involved in a dramatic search on Saturday night after the body of a fisherman was found at sea off the north Kent coast.

His crew mate survived the night on one of the wartime Maunsell forts in the estuary. Their fishing boat was found drifting around 6.5 miles north of Herne Bay. The body was picked up by Whitstable lifeboat, before being transferred to the Sheppey crew who brought it to shore.

➔ Youth services secure

THE future of Sheerness County Youth Club was secured last week when a meeting agreed a new trust should be formed to manage the club and all youth provision across the island.

The trust will be formed of existing trustees and representatives of the Sheppey community and will ensure provision will be extended to young people across the island, from Rushenden to Warden.

COMMUNITY

Lottery cash to help revive area's fortunes through people power

COMMUNITIES on Sheppey are celebrating after their numbers came up and they received a £1 million cash boost from the National Lottery.

It is part of the pioneering Big Lottery Fund scheme to put decision-making power in the hands of local people.

Now the people in Leysdown, Warden and Eastchurch will have to decide how they would like to spread the money around over the next decade, a process that may take some time in the consultation period.

They said it may include anything from creating new community facilities to starting up training and employment schemes, tackling anti-social behaviour, or providing more activities for young people.

Residents also benefit from a range of support, training and networking opportunities to enable them to make best use of the cash.

The money comes from a £200m Big Lottery Fund scheme called Big Local, which aims to give communities a leading role in making decisions about how to improve their area and tackle local problems.

To receive it, areas must have a history of difficulty in getting support and funding and face a range of issues, such as a decline of local industry, high unemployment or low average wages, or a pressing need for new support services or activities.

Fiona Dempsey, head of the south east region, said: "This funding scheme puts residents at the heart of decision making and gives them a real say in how to improve their area.

"But more than that it's going to strengthen these communities and help people to build on their skills and experience so that they can continue to work together to overcome challenges, address problems, and make a positive difference in their communities over the next 10 years, and beyond."

She said rather than just using the money to simply allocate grants for initiatives, residents are encouraged to use different, more sustainable ways of financing, for example giving loans or funding social enterprises, where money could be reinvested in the community.

It's not the first in Kent to get money like this. In 2010, Northfleet North in Gravesend won a similar award of £1 million.

One of the biggest issues was lack of park and play areas for children and young people.

With the aid of their MP Adam Holloway, the community are now in talks with a company regarding the possibility of accessing some of their disused land. The community is currently developing its improvement plan and an online map of their progress.

Residents' HGV misery close to end as missing roads set to be replaced soon

By Chris Britcher

chris.britcher@archant.co.uk

STOLEN traffic signs which stopped lorries from entering Kemsley and causing chaos on the roads, are set to be replaced "within weeks".

Residents were left fuming after two signs, placed at the Grovehurst Avenue and Grovehurst Road roundabout in Kemsley disappeared months ago.

The signs alerted HGV drivers to the fact there was restricted access through the village – and to use the Swale Way instead.

But since they went missing, lorries have been driving into Kemsley via Grovehurst Avenue and forced to do U-turns.

Mike Whiting, Conservative Kent County Council member for Swale Central, said: "The signs directed lorries wishing to get to industry to the north and east of Kemsley via the main Grovehurst Roundabout and Swale Way.

"When they were stolen, lorries came into the village and had to do U-turns when they realised there was no way through.

"Residents complained to me about this and I took it up with KCC Highways department.

"They have agreed to bring forward an element of their planned signage scheme for the northern relief road and install new signs at the Grovehurst Road/A249 roundabout and the Grovehurst Road/Grovehurst Avenue roundabout as a matter of urgency.

"These signs will tell HGV drivers that they need to use Swale Way, and not go through the village.

"I am told that work will

POINTING THE WAY:

Mike Whiting, Tory KCC member for Swale Central, campaigned to get the missing road signs replaced start immediately and that the signs will be in place in the next couple of weeks.

"This is great news for those residents in The Willows, Grovehurst Avenue and Ridham Avenue who complained to me about the noise and the shaking of their homes as these huge lorries drove through the residential areas."

It is thought the signs may have been swiped for their perceived scrap metal value.

MP kicks off work on school's artificial pitch

SPORTS Minister Hugh Robertson will mark the start of work on a new artificial grass pitch at Faversham's The Abbey School during a special presentation today.

The Conservative MP, minister for sport and Olympics, will be at the school in the morning to accept a cheque from the Football Foundation charity towards the project.

He said: "This is great news for Faversham in general and the Abbey School in particular.

"In Olympic year, it is wonderful for the town to have such an exciting new state-of-the-art facility and I am very grateful to the Football Foundation for making it happen."

The school worked in partnership with the Kent FA to secure a grant of £390,000 from the Football Foundation towards the project.

Funded by the Premier League, the FA, and the Government (via Sport England), the Football Foundation is the country's largest sports charity. The project will enable the school to develop its football activities, ensuring it has a comprehensive programme for all year groups. The facility will also allow three FA Charter Standard partner clubs to grow and sustain their participation levels, providing them with a quality facility to assist with their training and match programmes.

Simon Finlan, director of sport at school, said: "Over 60 per cent of the facilities' usage will be community based, giving benefit to local primary schools, the general public and particularly our two main youth football teams, Faversham Strike Force FC and Faversham Town Youth & Juniors FC."

Businesses warned that fire crews won't go to automatic 999 alarms

KENT'S fire service is to start ignoring automatic fire alarms during the day unless a real person confirms an emergency – and business leaders say it's vital they get their systems in tip-top condition.

Kent Fire and Rescue Service has now stopped its routine attendance at automatic alarms in some circumstances. It is part of a recent cost-cutting exercise which included the closure of eight fire stations across Kent.

With 98 per cent of all automatic alarms being false, KFRS has changed the way these are dealt with, and has called on businesses across the county to be aware of the new method of dealing with them.

From April 2, all calls from automatic fire alarms will be challenged by the service's 999 staff. Between 6am-6pm, unless the incident can be confirmed to be an actual fire or signs of fire, an engine will not be sent, they said.

But for a year, a fire engine will be sent to calls to automatic fire alarms received between 6pm-6am, where a procedure has not been introduced to confirm a fire. This is to allow those responsible for managing premises extra time to make any required changes to their procedures. This applies to all calls.

False alarms are generally the result of dust or poor maintenance.

In recent months, fire safety officers have met with organisations and business across the county advising them of the changes.

KFRS said its officers are constantly reminding businesses it is their responsibility to ensure systems operate correctly, are properly maintained and do not produce unwanted calls.

Following the changes, they will need to be clear on what to do when the alarm goes off, how they will check if there is a fire or signs of fire, and will need to ensure their fire risk assessment takes into account the changes.

Jo James, Kent Invicta Chamber chief executive, said: "Not attending all automatic alarms is not a good thing, but it's understandable. So many times the fire service is called out to false alarms. We can't be such a drain on resources. One day a company might need the fire service and they are not going to be there, so there is an onus on us all as businesses to ensure we have the right fire systems in place and they are being properly monitored."

KFRS director of service delivery Steve Griffiths said: "Each call takes firefighters and equipment away from genuine emergencies where lives may be at risk and causes disruption on the roads because, in the majority of the cases, firefighters arrive on blue lights and no action is required."

Magician shares story of survival

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

A NEW book tells the story of a PoW whose survival of World War Two is simply a miracle.

Prisoner of war Fergus Anckorn was the only person left alive after a notorious massacre, he was bombed several times, covered in creosote under a tropical sun, and finally taken out to be machine gunned by his Japanese captors.

And alongside his amazing escapes from death in war is a tale of magic – the man known as the Conjuror on the Kwai used his sleight of hand tricks to obtain food for his comrades as they fought to stay alive amid the horror of the infamous 'Death Railway'.

His story has now been told by author Peter Fyans in Captivity, Slavery and Survival as a Far East POW, published by Pen and Sword.

Mr Anckorn, born in Dunton Green, near Sevenoaks, became the youngest ever member of the Magic Circle at the age of 18 – and now at 93 is its oldest member who is still performing.

But in 1941 as a Royal Artillery gunner, he was sent into Singapore, just days before it fell to the Japanese.

"After three-and-a-half months at sea we came into the harbour under fire, shelling and bombing," he said from his home in Sevenoaks.

"We came down the gang plank and straight into action.

"I was a gun driver and knocked out of action after five days. So my fighting war was five days long. For that I was signed up for seven years and three days."

Wounded, Mr Anckorn drifted in and out of consciousness in hospital.

"I saw the walking wounded being taken quietly out in single file, their hands tied tightly with barbed wire and tied to one another. Behind them was a soldier with a rifle and bayonet," he said. "After bayoneting and killing the lot of them, the soldiers came

"I was the only survivor. When I'd been blown up my right hand was in a mess and the doctor had applied a tourniquet.

practical help. In front of the camp commandant, who was impressed with his sleight of hand, Mr Anckorn used tinned food and fresh fruit as props – so he got to eat them as the Japanese rejected anything a prisoner had touched.

“We had 10-minute breaks from work,” he said. “I’d do magic and the guards would watch, turning those breaks into 45 minutes, when my friends would be stealing potatoes from the Japanese stores.”

Mr Anckorn said he never saw morale go down among the prisoners, despite the terrible conditions and treatment.

“Then on one occasion four guards selected five of us at random and drove us out into the jungle,” he said.

“They stood us up against the trees, got a machine gun out, mounted it on its tripod and aimed it at us.

“We didn’t have blindfolds, we just stood waiting to be killed for 10 minutes. We asked each other ‘why don’t they pull the trigger and get it over with?’

“Then suddenly they dismantled the gun and took us back to camp – where we found the war had been over for three days.

“They must have known that and also knew we were going to be told that evening. So I think they thought they would be hanged, after all there were 2,000 of us and 80 of them, and so they thought to take some of us with them.

“But then they must have thought ‘what if they don’t intend to hang us? Well they will if they see what we have done’.

“I think that is what saved us.”

“Apparently the tourniquet was no good, blood was still pouring out of me and when they came to bayonet me they saw all the blood and thought they’d already done it.”

Taken to a prisoner of war camp Mr Anckorn was set to work on the Burma Railway Wampo Viaduct, made famous by David Lean’s film Bridge on the River Kwai.

On one occasion he was told to creosote the top of a viaduct – 100 feet above ground.

“As a result of being bombed a certain part of my brain was damaged, which gave me vertigo,” he said. “I tried to tell the guard using sign language but he just went off to find something to beat me with.

“I started climbing up there a leg at a time but when I got to the top I couldn’t open my eyes. I was just clinging to the bridge. The guard came up after me and threw my five gallons of creosote over me and I started to swell up like the Michelin Man. I ended up in the river but so badly burned I was taken away for treatment.”

All eight members of his working party were dead within three weeks.

MP calls for medicine trial improvements

GORDON Henderson has signed an Early Day Motion in the House of Commons calling for an improvement in the safety testing of new drugs and reduce the figure of 10,000 people in the UK killed each year due to side effects. It is estimated around a one million people are hospitalised as a result. Mr Henderson said: “Too many patients are harmed by medicines meant to help them.”

Thousands suffering in silence with dementia urged to come forward

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

THE stigma attached to dementia has led to a staggering number of people going undiagnosed in the county, say public health bosses.

New figures show worrying numbers are avoiding visiting their GP for fear of being diagnosed with the disease.

In east Kent it is thought there are around 6,950 people secretly struggling with the condition, without access to drug treatment or support. The dementia register shows 3,875 people are diagnosed with the condition in the east of the county, just 35 per cent of the total number believed to have dementia.

In Medway it is 1,093 diagnosed – 43 per cent of the estimated number of sufferers – with around 1,400 thought to remain undiagnosed. West Kent has 3,293 diagnosed – 37 per cent of the estimated number – with around 5,422 believed to be undiagnosed.

The figures show a rise since the last count in 2010, and health bosses have warned the number of people developing the degenerative brain disease is expected to grow as people live longer.

There are currently 18,000 people living with the condition in the county and this is expected to increase to 31,000 by 2026.

Commissioning manager for NHS Kent and Medway and Kent Adult Social Services Emma Hanson said the earlier the diagnosis the better.

"This isn't something that people just get as they get older; it's a mental health problem," she said.

"I won't dress this up; it's a horrible, life-changing and degenerative disease. You can't stop dementia, but you can manage it. That's why it's so important that people get diagnosed."

A range of services are available across the county including dementia cafés, crisis support, a 24-hour helpline, memory clinics and peer support groups.

Former social worker Ms Hanson, said people often avoid getting diagnosed and it can take a crisis for the sufferer and their family to finally face up to the problem.

Ms Hanson said Kent was lagging behind with its diagnosis rates.

"Improving rates is important as post-diagnostic support and treatment are essential in ensuring people with dementia and their carers are offered support to manage their condition.

"Evidence shows that the right support in the early stages means people are more resilient and prepared, therefore less likely to go into crisis as their disease progresses."

A large scale redesign of services is taking place, including bringing together social care, community nursing and community mental health teams to share knowledge and skills; developing dementia-friendly communities; and working to promote independence and help people live well with their dementia.

Tom, a 58-year-old dementia sufferer from Maidstone, said the peer support group service had helped him cope and enjoy life.

"Fifteen months ago I was diagnosed with vascular dementia. I attended an eight-week post diagnostic course run by the NHS," he said.

"After that finished, there was nothing else. I felt alone because I couldn't see anybody else with dementia. Everyone looks the same. You think there is no-one else out there with dementia.

"Fortunately, in February I found the peer support group in Maidstone. I get support and information, but also I know there are other people with dementia who are there to help me."

POLITICS

Different issues, one goal: the quartet who aim to secure your vote and win Kemsley by-election

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

FOUR candidates are preparing to go head-to-head in the battle for the Kemsley seat on Swale Borough Council.

The seat was left empty following the death of popular Tory councillor Brenda Simpson last December, who represented residents for 23 years after being elected in 1988.

Candidates for the by-election on Thursday, March 8, are Mike Whiting for the Tories; Richard Raycraft for Labour; Berick Tones for the Lib Dems; and Ukip's Derek Carnell.

Mr Whiting, who is cabinet member for education, learning and skills on Kent County Council, said he was determined to carry on the good work of Mrs Simpson should he be elected.

"Traffic through the village is a big issue for residents and one of my priorities," he said.

"But I would make sure that both large issues and small issues are dealt with.

"For example, there are barriers up at the county park to stop cars and bikes getting through, but I was speaking to a mother-of-two who can't get her double buggy through when she goes walking.

"Dealing with traffic is important, as is getting roads adopted, and also dealing with the awful smell that comes through Kemsley, but I want residents to know that I would also help with the smaller issues."

Labour's candidate Richard Raycraft, who has lived in Sittingbourne all his life, said Kemsley needed a higher profile on the Tory-run council.

"There needs to be a spokesman on issues such as the completion of the Northern Relief Road, guidance on the Swale Core Strategy, maintenance of community safety budgets, and monitoring of smell pollution from Ridham Dock," he said.

He also stressed the impor-

IN THE RUNNING: (Clockwise) Berick Tones, Derek Carnell, Mike Whiting and Richard Raycraft are all standing for the Kemsley seat

tance of dealing with speeding on Atlee Way and the inadequacy of the local roundabouts.

During canvassing in the south west part of the ward he gathered information over concerns with schooling and anti-social behaviour as well as localised traffic problems.

Kemsley resident Berick Tones is standing for the Lib Dems.

"I am running because I believe the issues that residents face should not be subject to party politics," he said.

"Someone who will address those day to day quality of life issues that affects us all.

"Things like access to medical services; housing and development, and the infrastructure to support it; schooling; the quality and cost of public transportation; the condition of the roads, and how we stop people speeding on them; and top of my personal agenda, supporting those who are trying to make a difference to improve their own communities."

Ukip candidate Derek Carnell, who defected from the Conservative Party last year, is also standing.

He said he was concerned the council was making decisions without proper consultation with residents and implemented policies that had no public support.

He also said he was angry at the neglect of residents in new build areas like Kemsley Fields.

"I would like to see a parish council established for Kemsley so that local residents can have more say in what happens in their areas and can reflect community concerns with a unified voice.

"Party politics have caused a lot of problems in Swale, as residents suffer when councillors put their party before the people they represent.

"I want to challenge that by putting the people of Kemsley first and giving them a strong independent voice."

EVENT

Dickens is centre stage at the Travel and Leisure Show 2012

By Nick Ames
nick.ames@archant.co.uk

THIS year sees the 200th anniversary of the birth of one of the world's favourite authors, Charles Dickens.

And leading Kent attraction Dickens World in Chatham is holding celebrations to mark the bicentenary.

Visitors can see what the site has planned at this year's free Travel and Leisure Show at the Dover Cruise Terminal on March 10-11.

The Archant KOS Media event has attracted many leading names in the tourist industry from the South East and the Continent.

These include White Cliffs Country, English Heritage, Penshurst Place, the Historic Dockyard Chatham, and Canterbury Tales, along with representatives from Arras, St Omer and other parts of northern France.

Dickens World, which takes visitors back into Dickensian England and immerses them in the urban streets, sounds and smells of the early 19th century, is set for a bumper year because of the intense interest in the author, who has many connections to Kent.

One of the events celebrating the anniversary is to be held in the Britannia Theatre next month.

It is a theatrical adaptation of Great Expectations, which is being put on by The Baroque Theatre Company on March 16. The show tells how young Phillip Pirrip, known as Pip, helps the escaped convict Abel Magwitch and sets in motion a train of events that will affect his entire life.

Taken under the wing of the eccentric Miss Havisham, Pip falls in love with her ward, the chilly Estella, and determines to become a gentleman.

A spokesman for the event said: "Bringing to life all the vivid characters of the original and conveying the story with great clarity, atmosphere and theatrical flair, Hugh Leonard's adaptation of Charles Dickens' most popular novel is both exciting and haunting."

ON CAMERA: Police would like to speak to several men following the robbery of a phone shop

CRIME

Police issue images after raid on town phone shop

POLICE have released CCTV footage of a gang of men they would like to speak to following a robbery in a mobile phone store in the town centre.

The incident took place around 4pm on Sunday, February 19, at the O2 store in the High Street, Sittingbourne.

Although no one was hurt during the incident, a number of mobile phones are reported to have been taken.

Now police officers investigating have released images of four men that they would like to speak to in connection with the incident.

Detective Sergeant Paul Fewtrell from Kent Police said: "The store's alarm systems sounded during the incident and I'm hopeful that the attention of other shoppers in the High Street would have been drawn to the store as a result."

"I would appeal to anyone who was in the area at the time and who saw anything suspicious to contact us, or to call Kent Crimestoppers anonymously on 0800 555 111."

Anyone with information is asked to contact DS Fewtrell, Sittingbourne CID, on 101, quoting crime reference XY/5262/12.

Women and girls invited to join anniversary celebrations by recreating Channel crossing

By Chris Murphy
editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

IT'S been 100 years since the first woman flew across the English Channel, and to mark a century of female flight, a Kent airport is launching a major celebration.

Harriet Quimby was born in Arcadia, Michigan, in America, and played a major role in getting women in to the cockpit. The journalist became interested in flying in 1910 when she went to an airshow, she got her licence just a year later.

One year on from then, in the early hours of April 16, 1912, she took off from Dover in a Bleriot monoplane, taking 59 minutes to fly 25 miles and landing safely on a beach at Hardelot-Plage, about 20 miles from Calais.

This was just three years after Louis Bleriot famously became the first person to make the trip – but he did it in the opposite direction.

Sadly for Harriet at the time, there were few plaudits apart from the Daily Mirror which had sponsored the flight – as the Titanic had sunk just the day before, so stealing all the headlines.

Now there is a chance for the women and girls of Kent to follow in her vapour trail. Headcorn airfield, near Maidstone, is celebrating the centenary in style.

On March 10 the Women Of Aviation Worldwide is organising the fly-in. Across the Channel: Women

PIONEER: Harriet Quimby, left, was the first woman to fly across the English Channel. Aerobatic star Pascale Alajouanine, right, will be among the women celebrating the anniversary of her achievement Unifying Nations, which will take place simultaneously at Headcorn and Le Touquet Airport in France.

This event, one of the many taking place worldwide during Women Of Aviation Worldwide Week, aims to encourage women to consider learning to fly.

Pilots from all around Europe and North America will fly across the English Channel with girls and women flying in a small aircraft for the first time. The fleet of aircraft will be diverse and include airplanes, seaplanes, helicopters, and even ultra-lights, organisers said.

Among them will be famous fliers like Canadian pilot Jane Planchon, and aerobatic champion Pascale Alajouanine.

Both airports have planned many free activities including viewing and tasting of local products, discovery of aviation history, information about learning to fly and aviation opportunities available, test tries of aviation products, and speeches by prominent aviation professionals.

Yobs' m-way bridge attack

POLICE have issued a warning about throwing objects from road bridges after a car on the M20 had its windscreen smashed last Saturday.

The Toyota Rav 4 was at junction three on the London-bound carriageway at 6.45pm when an object was hurled from the roadbridge above. It hit the windscreen of the car causing it to shatter.

The driver, a woman in her 20s, was unhurt.

Insp Nick Sparkes said: "This could have easily smashed the windscreen and struck the driver with disastrous consequences. Throwing anything at a vehicle is irresponsible and malicious, but to throw something large from a bridge at a vehicle could kill someone."

Farmers' market to launch on the quay

By Chris Britcher

chris.britcher@archant.co.uk

ORGANISERS behind a new Faversham farmers' market say they are keeping their fingers crossed for good weather as the inaugural event takes place this weekend.

Taking place at Standard Quay, the weekly event has already secured more than a dozen traders with hopes of it growing as word spreads of the new venue.

Janet Creed, who works at the quay and is spearheading the drive to set up the market, said: "We are hoping it will catch on. We have spoken to the Kent Farmers' Market Association and they have advised us as to what would work best.

"We think the location could work really well – it's a very pretty place and there are already a host of traders operating down there which attracts crowds.

"I know lots of farmers' markets around Kent take place every month or every fortnight, but we think this will work every week.

"We want people to go and buy something nice and know they can go back there the next week and get it again – so the market becomes part of their weekly shopping habits."

The market takes place between 10am and 2pm, with Sunday's event hopefully being the first of many.

Mrs Creed adds: "There's not an awful lot to do in Faversham on a Sunday so we hope this will become something of a focal point.

"We think we'll attract people from across the area, from Sittingbourne, Whitstable and Canterbury.

"I know there are lots of other farmers' markets in Kent which take place, but with the venue, the barges and the other stores – plus the regular flea market which takes place here – Standard Quay should become quite a bustling venue."

There has been a recent surge in popularity of farmers' markets – driven by a desire to eat fresh, locally-grown and produced food and drink, as well as cutting down food miles to protect the environment.

There is also a belief that investing in local producers will see the money re-invested back into the local economy – thus protecting local jobs and associated supply chains.

The Faversham Farmers' Market takes place on Sunday, March 4, at Standard Quay, from 10am to 2pm, and then every Sunday.

See www.kfma.org.uk to find out more about farmers' markets.

Children can learn to be Litter Angels thanks to lottery cash

By James Benjamin

yourswale@kosmedia.co.uk

AN environmental art charity has picked up a £9,700 grant to help fund a series of workshops in our schools this September.

Litter Angels, formed in 2008 by MP Gordon Henderson and local environmental artist Sioux Peto, aims to educate youngsters on the dangers of dropping litter.

Now it has picked up the cash boost from the Big Lottery's Awards for All grant.

The cash will now help deliver art-based workshops in Swale schools, raising awareness of the problems of littering and creating anti-litter posters and sculptures from recycled materials.

Sioux Peto said "We really appreciated everyone's support in this venture and this new money will make all the difference. It's going to be very exciting for everyone in Swale. Litter is a blight on our beautiful environment and we need to work together to make a difference."

Conservative MP Mr Henderson set up the idea of Litter Angels in 2008 with his short story about the adventures of Eric the Litter Angel. He read the story at school assemblies to raise awareness about the problems of littering – developing the concept with Ms Peto.

Now, together with Colin Barnard, owner of

THUMBS-UP: Project leader Sioux Peto and trustees, Colin Barnard, Jess McMahon, Gordon Henderson and Susanah Butcher celebrate the grant

the Polka Dot Art Centre in Teynham, Jess McMahon, constituency caseworker for Mr Henderson, and Susanah Butcher, head of the eco-group at Bapchild and Tonge CofE Primary School, work is continuing to attract partnerships with businesses and community groups.

In addition to Awards for All, the charity is sponsored by the McDonalds' Sittingbourne and Sheppey franchise and Rocque Recycling, the textile recycling company based on Sheppey. Keep Britain Tidy and the Campaign to Protect Rural England are also supporters.

Details of workshops, events and how you may get involved can be found on the Litter Angels web site at www.litterangels.org.

The Litter Angels will also be at the Pulse Café in Park Road, Sittingbourne, on March 7 and 14, from 11am to 3pm, with workshops which create art from recycled materials – entry is £1 per person.

During the Easter holidays, workshops for youngsters aged seven years and up will be held at the Polka Dot in Teynham on Wednesdays 10.30am-12.30pm. These cost £5 per person.

HEALTH

Early diagnosis is key to beat bowel cancer

MP GORDON Henderson has vowed to raise awareness levels of bowel cancer treatment in the corridors of power at Westminster after hearing first hand of the impact the illness has had.

The Conservative politician recently met Alison Selfe, from Milton Regis. She suffered from the illness and explained to the MP the impact it had on her life.

She is one of some 40,000 people diagnosed every year in the UK with bowel cancer. Almost half will die from the disease.

Bowel cancer remains the UK's second largest cause of death from cancer.

Mr Henderson said: "I was moved by hearing about Alison's experience of bowel cancer and I am completely committed to playing my part as the local MP in helping to beat bowel cancer."

"We know that early diagnosis, improved awareness and better access to treatments are vital if we are to save more lives."

"I will be working in Parliament to raise awareness of these issues and campaign for further improvements for patients."

Alison Selfe added: "Bowel cancer can affect anyone, men and women, young and old. But the good news is, if diagnosed early, bowel cancer can be successfully treated. Therefore it is essential that everyone is aware of the signs and symptoms of the disease, and that all those invited to take part in screening do so – it could save your life."

More information can be found on the Beating Bowel Cancer charity website at www.beatingbowelcancer.org.

ON TRACK: Train travel has changed dramatically in the years since the guide was first published

Railway guide offers a 19th century view of towns and travel

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

AN historic travel book, made famous by a recent television series, has given us a glimpse of our towns in times gone by.

For the last few years former Tory cabinet minister Michael Portillo has been using the Victorian travel guide Bradshaw's to negotiate his way around the British Isles as part of a TV show looking at railways and 19th century heritage.

Bradshaw's Handbook is widely regarded as one of the first tourist guides ever produced, being published as the popularity of exploring by rail reached its peak.

Originally a producer of railway timetables, George Bradshaw branched out with his handbook which included local attractions, sites of historic interest, and advice on where to stay. Handily for the time, the details of the nearest telegraph station were also included.

Extremely famous in its day, the guide was frequently referenced in literature.

Perhaps the most famous example is by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in the Sherlock Holmes story The Valley of Fear.

He wrote: "The vocabulary of Bradshaw is nervous and terse, but limited."

Other references include the Holmes story, The Adventure of the Copper Beeches; Lewis Carroll's long poem Phantasmagoria and – most unusually – Bram Stoker's Dracula, which makes note of the vampire reading an "English Brad-shaw's Guide" as part of the preparations for his voyage to the country.

TRAVEL GUIDE: Bradshaw's has recently been republished

The 1863 edition of the book put Kent in the same section as Sussex, Hampshire, Devon, Dorset, the Channel Islands and the Isle of Wight.

Following the Portillo TV series – which has been running since 2009 – the book has just been reprinted in its original form.

Margate – the location for the first bathing machine – was one of the most popular holiday resorts in Victorian times.

Bradshaw's says it has a population of 8,874 and "steamers to London daily in summer, thrice weekly in winter". Gardener's Royal and the White Hart are recommended as places to stay.

The guide states of the town: "There is not, in the whole range of our sea-side physiography, a more lively, bustling place than this said Margate; albeit by those who are fettered down in said formalities and regard laughter as a positive breach of good breeding it is pronounced to be essentially and irredeemably vulgar."

"The streets are always a scene of continued excitement, and troops of roughish, ruddy-cheeked urchins, escorted by their mamas or nursery-maids traverse every thoroughfare about the town from morning until night."

The Sun or The Mitre are recommended for visitors to Chatham which, the guide states, has two fairs a year on May 15 and September 19, each lasting three days.

After a brief note on the naval dockyard it goes on to say: "Omnibuses run through Rochester to meet every train and the Sheerness steamer touches here. Population 36,177 including 7,000 or 8,000 dockyard-men and soldiers. Depots of marines, of several regiments of the line, and East India service are stationed at Chatham."

Visitors to Faversham, which has a market on Wednesday and Friday, are given a medieval history lesson: "It was a place of much note before the time of (King) Stephen who, however, built and endowed an abbey here for Cluniac monks and in which himself, his queen and his son Eustace were buried."

"At the dissolution, Stephen's remains were thrown into the river, for the sake of the leaden coffin in which they were contained."

Demand better broadband now

Broadband is great – if you can get it. KCC's Cllr Kevin Lynes explains better internet could be on its way, but only if people say they need it

HOW many of us use the internet every day?

The statistics show that internet use is going up all of the time. People are online for a huge variety of reasons. Everyone, from teenagers to great grandmothers, is using Facebook, Twitter and other social media.

Online gaming is hugely popular – whether it's the Nintendo Wii, Xbox or Playstation 3.

Away from the leisure activities, there are thousands of children using the web every day for education, both in school and at home. While adult learners and university students also depend on it for their research.

Add to both of those the massive implications of online communication to business and it is easy to see why many people see broadband as an essential utility – much like electricity or gas.

However, while some take broadband for granted, others feel the coverage is not as good as we would hope.

Through makekentquicker.com you could help to change that though.

Those missing out include teachers who cannot make the most of online resources, professionals who find they are unable to work on the move, and even business owners who have to sit in a restaurant or lay-by to get work done – because these are the only places that they can access the broadband network.

This simply has to change and I am passionate about putting it right.

What I want to see is more Kent households and businesses getting connections, and bringing superfast broadband to more of the county.

Already, the Government has matched KCC's £10m commitment to improving the infrastructure. Now it is all about showing the firms that provide broadband how much Kent needs improvements, which you can do on the website.

With the right support, we can show the broadband companies that they need to get stuck in to Kent. I want to see Kent work, learn and play in a way that reflects the century we live in.

I want rural parts of the county to have the same advantages as urban areas. I want Kent businesses to be competitive whatever part of the county they are in.

None of that, however, can be achieved without proving there is demand. And that is where the views of all Kent and Medway people will make the biggest difference.

The makekentquicker.com website is at the heart of a campaign to prove demand and is the place to go and register that you want better broadband for the county.

I want rural parts of the county to have the same as urban areas

What I would like to ask people to do is go to the website and register to say they want better broadband. By registering your desire to see improved broadband, you help us give the providers the nudge they need to recognise how important the network is to Kent.

By getting their commitment, we could see a total of £43m invested in broadband – bringing superfast broadband to 90 per cent of Kent and Medway properties, and at least 2mb speeds to the other 10 per cent.

But if we don't tell them we need better broadband, nothing will happen and – despite the commitments of KCC and the Government – we won't get the improvements.

Whether as a business owner, professional, parent or student, please get involved. Visit the makekentquicker.com website and help us prove that Kent needs better broadband.

KOS COMMENT

Yet again our farmers are facing a bleak year

FARMING is certainly an unpredictable profession – there are few industries that are so susceptible to the ups and downs of the weather.

Now Kent is in drought growers have to make the hard choice of whether it is worth planting acres of onions or potatoes if they cannot be irrigated.

And just as livestock prices are beginning to see an improvement after the disasters of foot and mouth and mad cow disease, they are hit by a new virus. The Schmallenberg bug causes horrendous deformities in unborn sheep and cattle and it has spread from Europe just as the lambing season begins.

Our farmers need help and we have to prioritise the production of food over so many other things we enjoy in life.

Fergus is just magic

THE story of Fergus Anckorn is a remarkable one. While a prisoner under the Japanese working on the Burma railway the young soldier used his sleight of hand skills to get extra food for himself and his colleagues. His resourcefulness shows what magic can be achieved even in the most dire circumstances.

Cameron must airport dream

THIS Boris Johnson pie in the sky pipe dream is just that. The Thames estuary airport will kill our villages, our towns.

On both sides of the water in Kent and Essex there are triple Sites of Special Scientific Interest – wetlands where migrating birds feed, plants, animals, and invisible micro-organisms, which would be damaged for ever.

The marsh is rich with life from Cliffe to the Isle of Grain, a truly lovely place.

This government is saying it is the greenest ever. So prove it Mr Cameron and drop Boris Johnson's pipe dream.

Wilson sets a 'fine' example

YOUR article on Fergus Wilson, candidate for the new position of police commissioner, says speeding drivers are a good source of income, and gloated that £900 in fines had been collected when he requested a speed trap near his house.

Yet he has had at least two speeding fines himself.

Mr Wilson says he does not know much about policing.

He should have also added he does not know much about road safety. But I expect his remarks will be welcomed by speed camera partnership members, including the police.

Many young drivers are killed because of a lack of any proper road craft schooling.

Those in charge think mindless obedience of speed limits is the highest form of driving skill, and those that don't are a good source of income.

Government nose you know

THERE is a new – or perhaps revived – threat to our privacy;

the hidden records of the database state.

Alas, it now appears the Home Office is preparing to reincarnate its previously abandoned Intercept Modernisation Programme, in the form of a Communications Capabilities Development Programme (CCDP).

It is believed the CCDP will provide the Government with access, via internet service providers, to long-lasting records of all our internet communication, whether by email, social media websites and multi-player games.

This is on top of the records already retained about our telephone use.

The Government's belief in its entitlement to snoop on us has got completely out of hand in recent years and is entirely contrary to the spirit of Article 12 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and Article 8 of the European Convention on Human Rights, which both declare the right to privacy of correspondence.

There are occasions when it is necessary for the police to intercept communications, but these should be executed on a targeted basis with specific authorisation from the courts.

Routine unwarranted mass surveillance has no legitimate part to play in the workings of a modern liberal democracy.

Sorry, facts tell real story

FOR 'dogma', look no further than Phil Grainger's climate change denial and use of spurious unsupported claims (Letters, February 26).

At least I try to back up my facts with sources which readers may check.

On record, he's previously claimed the 17th century 'Bauche' map shows Antarctica as ice-free. Wrong – it does the opposite even showing icebergs. It's the 15/16th century Piri Reis and Pinaeus Maps that speculate on an ice-free land, but they even get its position wrong.

Furthermore, tree ring and soil samples these, unless fossilised, largely only go back several thousand years.

Many only provide local climate results and can be less reliable the further back.

It is polar ice cores, which go back tens of thousands years, that can be much more reliable given that atmospheric gases and dusts migrate to the poles from around the globe; but these show just the natural changes until recently.

Last year an urban heat study by Berkeley (USA) Earth Institute in 2011, set up to disprove global warming, actually found the opposite especially over the last 60 years, and it's head Prof Muller ditched his own scepticism.

Now a stark warning, signed by 18 past winners of the Blue Planet award (the eco Nobel prize) issued on February 20, 2012, on the 40th anniversary of the UN

Enviro' programme stated: "(We) need a change to systems of governance or face 3-5C global temp rises and risk climate, biodiversity and poverty crises that will spawn greater problems."

Signatories include Prof Bob Watson, UK Gov' eco-science advisor; NASA's Prof James Hansen; and Prof Paul Ehrlich an expert on population issues.

This links with what I've been saying on needed societal changes, but never mind me Mr Grainger, try running your denial and vague info past real experts, etc, such as the above.

Green's fight for the jobless

KENT Green Party does not support the Government's approach to managing the economy or the deficit. It is creating unemployment which could be avoided.

We are disturbed the number of unemployed in the county has now reached more than 71,000. However the real figure may be more like 150,000 as the TUC has pointed out official figures in the UK do not give a reliable picture of unemployment and underemployment.

150,000 people not able to realise their full potential is what this Government's policies should really be addressing in our county.

Kent Green Party believes many useful green sector jobs could be created in Kent and Medway. A scheme of investment in jobs and apprenticeships could provide employment in insulating homes and minor construction for local community organisations.

Each council could direct schemes helping people into useful work while helping reduce the budget deficit as people pay taxes and national insurance.

By comparison, the Government's misdirected cuts reduce public sector and private sector employment, as the loss of the spending from one public sector job means one private sector job will be lost too.

We can do better than this, and Kent Green Party urges people to raise this matter with their MPs and local councils since, despite what the Coalition says, there are always alternatives.

Chamber backs superstore plan to pay those on work experience

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

MOVES by supermarket giant Tesco to pay work-experience placements referred through the Government's controversial Jobcentre Plus scheme have won the backing of Kent Invicta Chamber of Commerce.

The company took the decision after a Twitter campaign attacked the original plans, which allowed companies to hire benefit-claimants on four-week work experience for no pay except their expenses and Job Seeker's Allowance, which is £53.45 per week for under-25s.

The scheme was aimed originally at bringing the long-term unemployed back into a work environment, but campaigners said that if people pulled out they risked losing their benefits.

One group, called Unfair Workfare, branded it "slave labour" and activists gatecrashed a Tesco store in protest.

Now, as well as offering pay, Tesco says it will guarantee a job to those who successfully complete the placement.

Jo James, chief executive at Kent Invicta Chamber of Commerce, said: "Nobody says you have to revel in your work – probably few of us do – but you do need to enjoy the proper rewards for your efforts to appreciate the full benefits. What keeps most of us at work are those rewards, not the threat of losing what little we have."

JOBS: Jo James, of Kent Invicta Chamber of Commerce, says the change is a welcome boost for the unemployed

"Therefore, I am pleased that Tesco and others are revising their attitude to the scheme and adjusting it to reflect what appears to be pretty strong public opinion."

"Everybody has to knuckle down to the present very trying economic austerity. The Government is keen to insist we are all in this together."

"From a business perspective, it is heartening that major employers like Tesco are prepared to listen to public opinion and show a willingness to help young job-seekers in a positive fashion."

Tesco says that about a fifth of the 7,000 new jobs it intends to create this year will go to people coming through the Jobcentre route.

Richard Brasher, Tesco UK chief executive, said: "We know it is difficult for young people to give up benefits for a short-term placement with no permanent job at the end of it."

"So this guarantee that a job will be available, provided the placement is completed satisfactorily, should be a major confidence boost for young people wanting to enter work."

Ms James said she supported the principles behind the scheme: "Experience in the work environment is of benefit to young people who are struggling to get into permanent work placements."

"The Government assures us that in many cases the work experience results in permanent employment, and if that is the case it must surely be a good thing. Equally, if future employment prospects are heightened by the work experience undertaken, that is a positive advantage."

"Work experience, however, should be just that – experience of being at work – and the primary objective of working, for all of us, is being paid a suitable remuneration for that work."

"To truly experience the benefits of working, young people should also be able to experience the satisfaction of feeling that they are making a contribution and of being in a position where they are not on benefits."

Drought in spotlight on minister's visit

THE drought being suffered in Kent came under the microscope during a ministerial visit to a top scientific site.

The work undertaken by scientists at East Malling Research (EMR) and the work of East Malling Trust, the UK's largest independent funder of horticultural research, were given a ministerial vote of confidence and thanks during a visit by Lord Taylor of Holbeach, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State at the Department of the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (Defra).

He visited EMR as it was revealed that England and Wales could be heading for one of the driest winters on record, with the average winter rainfall being lower than the months preceding the 1976 drought.

Lord Taylor toured the centre to review a series of projects delivering irrigation science to support food production and reduce water consumption in horticulture.

He was particularly interested in the development of new varieties of strawberry, better able to cope with drought conditions through understanding their genome, as well as new techniques for reducing water consumption while maintaining yields, quality and shelf-life.

Lord Taylor's tour included the Unigro GroDome, the research centre's secure containment facility; the glasshouses; and the post-harvest Produce Quality Centre, operated in partnership with the University of Greenwich.

During his visit, Lord Taylor said: "East Malling Research has been at the forefront of many scientific advances in horticulture which have made an important contribution to the production of fruit and vegetables in the UK."

"They have coupled this with working closely with growers to make sure their research is translated on-farm."

"We need to produce more food to feed a growing global population. Scientific research to improve food production, while protecting the environment, is crucial to meeting that challenge."

Professor Peter Gregory, chief executive of EMR, outlined the vision behind the UK's pre-eminent research institute for strategic and applied research, development and innovation in horticulture.

Professor Gregory said: "The issue of water consumption by horticulture and agriculture will inevitably rise up the political agenda over the coming months."

"As a result it was very timely that we had the opportunity to brief Lord Taylor on our work and its implications for the UK, as well as overseas producers."

"East Malling is well placed to work with growers and the wider fresh-produce industry to adapt to climate change and to use resources such as water more efficiently through our research expertise in genetics and crop improvement, resource efficiency and pest and pathogen management."

"Our work in the area of post-harvest storage is also fundamental to reducing the country's levels of food waste throughout the food chain."

TRANSPORT

Bus station is now fully open

CHATHAM'S Waterfront Bus Station is now operational and has become an important part of the regeneration of the town centre, providing access to stores and firms.

Since its opening in the autumn it has also bought visitors to the area and so boosted the local economy – as well as providing a far more attractive gateway to the town.

Cllr Rodney Chambers, Medway Council leader, said: "This is a key part of the regeneration of Chatham town centre. It opens up the waterfront and helps with our aim of ensuring the area remains an important shopping destination for people across the region."

Engineering company FM Conway has been extensively involved with the project, undertaking initial groundworks, foundations, drainage, ductwork and surfacing for the £7 million project, completed on behalf of Medway Renaissance and Medway District Council.

The businesses' Civil Engineering Division completed preparatory enabling works to prepare the site.

The teams installed a new underground pumping chamber to redirect the path of sewage materials and installed 9,800m of blacktop asphalt surfacing and 4,800m of paving to the bus station as well as hard landscaping and surfacing adaptations to the adjoining road network, including The Brook and Globe Lane.

The bus station uses global positioning systems (GPS) technology to track the progress of buses and provide up-to-the-minute arrival and departure times on digital display boards. FM Conway's engineers installed new bespoke four and six inch under-surface communication ducting to carry electrical cables and information technology to each separate bus stand.

Martyn Simms, project manager for FM Conway, said: "This was a large and prestigious project and required many specialists to work together to see the scheme completed."

The new Chatham Waterfront Bus Station incorporates 19 bus stops, travel information and a ticketing centre with public toilets. The structure itself is covered with wooden cladding and an environmentally green "living" roof to improve the aesthetics from high points around the town.

Great reclaimer builds a business from flotsam

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

DRIFTWOOD blown onto Kent's beaches by the wind and tide is providing a thriving business for Robert Warne.

A builder by trade, known as "The Great Reclaimer", he has been collecting the timbers which once formed parts of ships, piers and breakwaters to create unique furniture and furnishings.

Examples of his work are currently on show at the Mariners Bar alongside the harbour in Ramsgate, where Warne also created the stand out piece of decor – the prow and stern of a fishing boat embedded in either side of an interior wall.

"I collect the wood from beaches, mainly in Thanet," he said. "People will call me up if they think there is something I'd be interested in. Or I'll take a look myself – it's especially productive after a big storm."

Chairs, tables, mirror frames and even the upstairs bar in the Mariners have been created by Warne.

"I've always made things out of items which have been discarded or that I have acquired," he said. "I used to work with old industrial materials when I lived up in Yorkshire."

"Then I moved to Wales and first got interested in wood. The first lot I collected lay in my garden for a year before I started to work with it."

"What attracts me about driftwood? Well it's free for a start. And I'm interested in the sea-eaten material. The beauty is in the wood itself, all I do is put it together."

"You can't buy what I make in a timber merchants. By the very nature of the wood – its shape and texture – everything I do is unique and a one-off."

"The wood itself can come from a number of sources and who knows how long it has been floating on the waves? Recently a couple of shipwrecks have been uncovered and their skeletons exposed by the shifting sands so some could originate there.

"Then there are the remains of piers

DRIFTER: Robert Warne compares himself to the materials used in his work and groins and other sea defences."

Warne started selling his creations at a market on Broadstairs seafront, where word of mouth built up his customer base. Now he has business from people across the south east and London as his reputation has grown.

"A lot of people who move to this area want something of the sea in their home and that has been a growing market for me," said Warne.

"I was born in Toronto, Canada, and I've always been a drifter. I drifted east – a long way – and now I'm here in Kent and I'm really happy. In fact this might be my last port of call."

State pension reform is needed now, says expert

AN expert has said the Government must not delay its planned overhaul of the State pension scheme.

So said Tim Mills, senior consultant at Tunbridge Wells-based employee benefit consultancy Brunning Newman Houghton Limited (BNH), adding that politicians have become reticent about a subject which is of great importance to almost everyone in Britain.

Mr Mills said: "I cannot help but notice that the politicians have gone strangely quiet on the pension front since the Department for Work and Pensions' dramatic announcement in April 2011, when it wheeled out proposals for an overhaul of the current State pension system entitled: A State Pension for the 21st century.

"At that stage the momentum for reform seemed unstoppable. The logic was irrefutable. Promise everyone a decent state pension, scrap the confusing state second pension and make it clear there would be no more credit or top-ups of any kind."

He added that this would signify the end to the often humiliating and incomprehensible means testing, and most importantly, those who saved privately or with their employer would be rewarded rather than punished for their thrift.

Mr Mills continued: "In the intervening period the deathly silence on the issue suggests it is in danger of being kicked into the political long grass as perhaps too difficult. We have heard some self-interested comments from representatives of the public sector pension schemes where these changes might reduce members' take-home pay by around one per cent, which would presumably cause some (more) industrial unrest.

TIME FOR CHANGE:
Tim Mills

"Inevitably, this change would produce winners and losers: the current generation of pensioners will not be included. It is regrettable that the Government cannot make these changes for all but I do not believe that should stop legislation to bring about reform in the medium term."

Mr Mills believe Pensions Minister Steve Webb summed the issues up perfectly in April 2011, when he said: 'The complexity of the current state pension system is a major barrier to saving'.

The consultant adds that both the pensions industry and instinctively most consumers see this complexity too.

He continued: "I also feel Joanne Segars, chief executive of the National Association of Pension Funds was right when she said: 'A simpler, more generous state pension is a win-win that could lift millions out of poverty without hitting the taxpayer's pocket. Those who are disadvantaged by the current system, like women and the self-employed, will be better off."

"A revamped state pension would enable everyone to see that there is a clear foundation for their retirement, and that it pays to save. They can then build on this through their own pension and savings."

"From my standpoint the proposed changes to State pensions should be integral to the forthcoming Workplace Pension Reform (WPR) legislation later this year. Without it, advisers will have to be careful to check whether an individual will benefit from being enrolled into their employers' pension scheme."

Barclays app could change the way people shift cash

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

BARCLAYS has launched Europe's first person-to-person service for sending and receiving money using mobile-phone numbers.

Barclays Pingit allows users to receive and send money, for free, to anyone with a UK current account and UK mobile-phone number, simply by using that mobile number without the need to share bank details.

The Barclays Pingit service will be available to current-account customers of all UK banks and building societies, not just those with Barclays current accounts.

At launch, only Barclays current-account customers will be able to send money via the app, but all current-account customers will be able to register online to receive money. The app will be available to all by early March.

The free service links the user's current account with their mobile-phone number. This enables payments to be sent directly to that account but without the sender needing to know anything more than the recipient's mobile-phone number.

Money is sent using the Faster Payments service. To send money, customers can use the free Barclays Pingit app available on iOS, Android and Blackberry, or they can register online to receive payments.

EASY OF USE: Barclays Pingit should be popular

Transfers are as safe as any other banking transaction and the app is protected by a five-digit passcode, set by the user.

It is expected this will prove particularly popular for friends and family sending money to each other. Barclays Pingit can also be used by some small-business customers of Barclays and other banks, for example sole traders such as window-cleaners or plumbers, meaning customers can pay them quickly, easily and securely.

Antony Jenkins, chief executive of Barclays

Retail and Business Banking, said: "Barclays Pingit could revolutionise the way people send and receive money.

"For friends splitting the cost of dinner, repaying a borrowed £10 or people sending money to a son or daughter at university, it's free, quick, convenient, secure and easy to use. You can send and receive money in seconds, without having to enter account details.

"We're committed to making customers' lives much easier, giving them more choice in how they manage their money, and Barclays Pingit absolutely does that.

"But it is not just Barclays customers who benefit as it's available to current-account customers of all the other UK banks, too. I'm sure we'll soon be wondering what we did before it."

The Barclays Pingit app can be downloaded for free now from the Apple App Store, BlackBerry App World and Android Market. Currently only Barclays current-account customers can use the app to send money, but a second release of the app, available soon, will enable non-Barclays current-account customers with smartphones to register via the app and send money.

UK current-account customers of any bank can register to receive payments with a UK mobile-phone number at www.barclays.co.uk/pingit regardless of what type of mobile phone they use.

MANUFACTURING

Expansion plans are a job boost for town

JOBBS are being created in Ashford as one of the town's manufacturing companies puts expansion plans into action.

CCL Label is increasing its manufacturing capability at its Foster Road plant to meet a growing need for its specialist products – and it is using one of the town's oldest established building firms to carry out the work.

Epps Construction began work this month on the 1,700-square-metre extension, which is set to create at least 15 new jobs and has been designed by Ashford's RDA Architects.

The specialist labelling company has been in Ashford since 1990, initially as part of the Inprint group that was acquired by CCL Label in 2005. The company provides a range of labels and information leaflets for the pharmaceutical, clinical-trial and agrochemical markets.

It employs more than 150 staff at its building, with the majority of jobs being taken by local people.

"Although we serve the UK market, 85 per cent of our output is exported, principally into mainland Europe, which is why our location here in Ashford, with its good transport links, is so important," said European marketing coordinator Claire Richardson.

FRANCHISING

HAPPY TO HELP: Franchises are typically associated with the fast-food industry, but they are also common in other fields, including health and fitness

Work for yourself... but don't be left by yourself

FRANCHISING is a way for individuals to do business by themselves while at the same time having the backing of a large organisation behind them.

A franchise is a right granted to an individual or group to market a company's goods or services within a certain territory or location.

Franchising is most commonly associated with fast-food outlets – but there are many different types of franchises available today, including catering and restaurants, automotive, cleaning and maintenance, health and fitness, financial services and pet-related franchises, to name just a few.

Some franchises can be operated from home, others require a store – while some just need a vehicle.

For anyone thinking about buying into a franchise system, it is important that they understand exactly how franchising works, what fees are involved and what is expected of them from the franchise company.

An individual who purchases and runs a franchise is called a franchisee. They buy a franchise from the franchisor.

And after the deal is created, the franchisee must follow certain rules and in most cases an ongoing franchise royalty fee, as well as an up-front, one-time franchise fee to the franchisor.

Franchising has become one of the most popular ways of doing business in today's marketplace.

Today, franchising is helping thousands of individuals be their own boss and own and operate their own business.

It allows entrepreneurs to be in business for themselves but not by themselves.

There is a much higher likelihood of success when an individual opens a franchise as opposed to a totally self-created business, since a proven business formula is in place.

The products, services and business operations have already been established, too.

There are many advantages to buying a franchise. Among these are corporate image, training and savings in time.

The corporate image and brand awareness of the company is already established and consumers are always more comfortable purchasing items from a familiar name or company they trust.

For training the franchisor usually provides extensive support to the franchise-owner to ensure staff live up to the brand reputation.

As for time, since the franchise company already has the business model in place, you can simply focus on running a business.

There is good reason franchising has been around for decades.

It is a great way for individuals to own and operate their own business. Those who are thinking about buying a franchise should do their homework, research the company and consult a franchise consultant or franchise legal adviser before making a final commitment.

Young people can connect at summer events

YOUNG people in Kent and Medway are being given the opportunity to spend a summer full of adventure and excitement, learning new skills, making new friends and even improving their CV with an exciting array of activities.

CXK (formerly Connexions Kent & Medway) is delivering National Citizen Service, which offers young people aged 15 and 16 the chance to take on adventurous challenges and put something back into the community through a social-action project.

Working in partnership with the National Youth Agency and O2 Think Big, CXK has been awarded 736 places, which are now up for grabs for 2012 year-11 leavers who either live or attend school in Kent.

For 17 days between June and August, young people will get to take part in a range of events, including a fun-packed five-day residential experience away from home featuring outdoor activities, inspirational speakers and a social-action festival celebrating the positive contribution young people can make to society.

On their return home, they'll be making a real impact in the community by organising their own social-action project, supported by O2 Think Big.

And when it all ends, they'll get the chance to meet prospective employers and colleges, finding out about training and volunteering opportunities.

What's more, NCS graduates will be invited to an event at The O2 in London to celebrate their achievements with a night of music, dance and entertainment.

Lauren Anning, head of delivery support, said: "This is a fantastic opportunity for young people to take part in an exciting new adventure as well as learn new skills that will equip them for the future."

NCS aims to promote a more cohesive, responsible and engaged society by bringing young people from different backgrounds together to make a difference in their communities.

Those taking part will learn practical skills, meet new people, improve their self-confidence, increase independence and be supported to make a positive transition to further education, employment or training.

For the whole experience, including the residential accommodation, food, transport and certificate for programme completion, not forgetting the celebration party, the organisers just ask for a £50 voluntary contribution, with bursaries available on request.

Training, courses and careers

Free training for young people

YOUTH charity the Prince's Trust is calling on unemployed young people from Kent to join a new course to help them into work.

This comes as more than one-in-four young people in the county are unemployed.

The Trust is looking for 18 to 25-year-olds to take part in its free two-week 'get into facilities management' programme, running in Canterbury from March 19.

The vocational training course is suitable for young people who are interested in a career in facilities management at a university, hospital or hotel. Running in partnership with UPP (University Partnership Programmes) and the University of Kent, it will give participants the chance to gain work experience in general maintenance, housekeeping and customer service.

Throughout the course, young people will take part in activities to build their skills and confidence. Participants will also receive ongoing mentoring support after the course to help them get a job. Last year, more than three in four young people helped by the Prince's Trust moved into work or training.

Information days for those interested in joining the course take place between March 5-7. For details or to book a place on an information session call Harj Sangha, text FM to 07795 166355, or email harj.sangha@princes-trust.org.uk.

Butchers prove to be a cut above

ONE of the city's top butchers shared their experience and tricks of the trade with catering students at Canterbury College.

Jim Williams and Jason Stokes from Wincheap Butchers gave a butchery demonstration to nearly 40 BTEC catering and hospitality students.

Mr Williams, who owns the business, and Mr Stokes, a cutter, demonstrated how to prepare specific cuts and joints of pork, and the importance of selecting the right joint for the right cooking process.

Following the demonstration, students Alister Curtis and Will Dougal were challenged to create a pork dish in an hour. They cooked up a roasted pork fillet on an artichoke rosti, with sweet potato mash and an apple scented jus.

Canterbury College's catering department has worked with Wincheap Butchers for many years, and Mr Williams and Mr Stokes are well-known faces to students and staff as respected local professionals.

The Wincheap duo have invited the students to watch trained butchers prepare other animals for sale at their shop in Wincheap High Street.

New apprentice Nigel is success number 600

WITH record number of youngsters in the jobless queue, a scheme in Medway is fighting back and has announced its 600th success.

Employ Medway helps jobseekers land a job and has been a major success, the council said.

Nigel Wren from Strood was recruited as an apprentice bricklayer on the Rochester Riverside housing development.

The 23-year-old had been after any sort of work for almost four years, before he went to the centre in High Street, Chatham, last October.

Just 10 weeks later, he landed his new role working for Owen Contractors Ltd.

He said: "I was always looking for a job but couldn't seem to get one for years. In the end I didn't think I was ever going to find work."

"Then my advisor at Employ Medway told me about this apprenticeship and introduced me to Zoe at the Skills and Employment Centre at Rochester Riverside.

"I really hoped I had a chance but wasn't confident. Zoe helped me get through an interview and arranged a work trial with Owen Contractors Ltd.

"I always wanted to work in construction because I like being outdoors and like making things. This apprenticeship has given me a real chance to get on in life."

His apprenticeship takes two years, during which he will be based on site and spend one day a week studying a diploma and NVQ in bricklaying at Mid-Kent College in Maidstone.

Being tooled up for building work helps, and the scheme made sure Nigel got a good start by supplying him with tools worth £75 from the council's EU funded SUCES project.

Owen Contractors director George McAllister, said: "It's great to have an apprentice on board and we're looking forward to showing Nigel the ropes and getting him involved in the project here at Rochester Riverside."

The contractor will gain a £2,000 subsidy towards Nigel's training costs as part of the council's apprenticeship subsidy scheme, GAPs.

Funding for the £200,000 scheme, launched last October to help businesses with an apprentice's wage or training costs, is split between the council and the Interreg 2

Seas programme, part funded by the European Regional Development Fund.

The council's apprenticeship schemes have also seen more than 250 apprenticeships created at local businesses over the past year, through both the subsidy scheme and the national 100 in 100 apprenticeship campaign, which created more than 190 trainee positions.

The Employ Medway Advice Centre was launched in September, 2009, and as well as helping jobseekers, has provided over 800 people with training on basic IT, interview and CV skills.

Medway businesses can also benefit from the council's Start-up grants and Partners for Growth loans for small firms.

FULL MARKS

IN THE WORKPLACE: Apprenticeships offer a wonderful opportunity for unemployed young people to kick-start their careers and learn crucial skills, too

APPRENTICESHIPS

Learning on the job can help build your future

APPRENTICESHIPS and job opportunities are hot topics at the moment as various Government schemes come under the microscope and the issue of youth unemployment creates widespread concern.

Learning and training are extremely important areas where schools, colleges, business and local authorities can work together for the benefit of all.

The Coalition Government recently announced a new initiative, led by Deputy Prime Minister Nick Clegg, which will put £126 million into a scheme aimed at encouraging NEETS (teens who are not in education, employment or training) to obtain some form of work or education.

Forming part of the Government's youth contract scheme to address growing youth unemployment, it aims to provide businesses and charities with the chance of applying for up to £2,200 of funding to employ them.

With youth unemployment hitting 1.04 million in December 2011, it is vital to take action and ensure these more important years in a young person's career are not squandered.

Meanwhile, a commission chaired by Labour's David Miliband has called for co-ordinated action to address the lack of leadership in addressing hot-spots of youth unemployment.

The report, commissioned by Acevo, the voluntary and charity groups organisation, suggests the Government needs to re-vamp the Department For Work And Pensions work programme so that it addresses more urgently the tens of thousands of young unemployed – with one of the main arreas being addressed by all parties.

Young people need to be 16 or over to apply for an apprenticeship. Entry requirements will depend on the apprenticeship they want to do and there are three levels:

■ Intermediate (equivalent to five good GCSE passes).

■ Advanced level (equivalent to two A-level passes).

■ Higher apprenticeships (lead to qualifications at NVQ level 4 or, in some cases, a foundation degree).

Depending on grades in GCSE maths and English, applicants may need to take a literacy and numeracy test.

Young people aged 16-24 who need to improve their skills to get an apprenticeship might be able to join the Access To Apprenticeship scheme.

This is run by the National Apprenticeship Service and helps young people deal with the disciplines and routines of the workplace.

A new national minimum wage of £2.60 per hour for apprentices was introduced on October 1, 2011. This applies to all apprentices aged 19 or over in the first year of their apprenticeship.

Any person already doing an apprenticeship with an employer should continue to get a weekly wage of at least £95. If they work in agriculture, the minimum wage may be different.

Many employers tend to pay more as apprentices develop their skills. Research has found that the average apprentice takes home about £170 per week.

Like most other employees, apprentices get at least 20 days' paid holiday per year and bank holidays, too.

EDUCATION

Boarding could be just the thing for your child's school needs

DID your child get into their school of choice? If they didn't, consider us.

The Duke of York's Royal Military School is a co-educational full state boarding school for 11- to 18-year-olds. This means that you will only pay for your child's boarding care as the Government pays for their education. A total of £9,750 a year includes all of your child's boarding, meals, laundry and exams, offering real value for money.

Established for more than 200 years, your son or daughter will enjoy a high quality of pastoral care with us and also benefit from a supportive boarding community.

Located between Dover and Canterbury and set in 150 acres of beautiful countryside, we combine traditional values, a military ethos and outstanding academic results with modern teaching and sport.

Our sports facilities include a swimming pool, gym, running track and rugby and cricket pitches, as well as a shooting range and outdoor assault course.

We are proud of our pupils' academic achievements. The school's GCSE results are double the national average: in 2011, 93 per cent of pupils gained five or more GCSE grades A*-C or equivalent, including English and mathematics, with more than 95 per cent passing at A-level.

On top of this, more than 90 per cent of our students choose to go on to university.

With a focus on leadership, self-discipline, respect and teamwork and ceremonial parades, the Duke of Edinburgh Awards Scheme and Combined Cadet Force activities are at the heart of the school. As it is full boarding, your child will never be bored as they are kept busy with more than 70 clubs and activities from which to choose.

Kay Pott, who has a son attending the school, said: "The school has been fantastic. We are over the moon with the way they've brought our son on – we can't praise them enough."

"We feel he's done better academically than he would have done at another school. He's good at sport and has been on trips abroad to Spain, South Africa and America."

"I really value the school's ethos – they instil respect for yourself and others and build up the pupils' self-esteem in different ways so the children become confident young men and women."

The school, which became an academy last year, has been awarded £24.9m to transform boarding houses and teaching facilities. In 2010, it received £9.5m from academy sponsor the Ministry of Defence to build a sixth-form boarding house. The academy's specialisms are science, sports, music and outdoor education.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS BOROUGH COUNCIL

TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING (GENERAL PERMITTED DEVELOPMENT) ORDER 1995

NOTICE OF THE MAKING OF A DIRECTION UNDER ARTICLE 4(1) TO WHICH ARTICLE 5 APPLIES

NOTICE is hereby given that Tunbridge Wells Borough Council ("the Authority") has made a Direction under Article 4(1) of the Town and Country Planning (General Permitted Development) Order 1995 ("the Direction").

The Direction applies to development of the type specified in the First Schedule to this Notice within the area described in the Second Schedule to this Notice.

The effect of the Direction is that permission granted by article 3 of the Town and Country Planning (General Permitted Development Order) 1995 shall not apply to development of the type specified in the First Schedule to this Notice and that such development shall not be carried out within the area specified in the Second Schedule to this Notice unless planning permission is granted by the Authority on an application made to the Authority under Part III of the Town and Country Planning Act 1990.

A copy of the Direction and of the map defining the area of land covered by it may be seen at the Council's Tunbridge Wells Gateway, 8 Grosvenor Road, Royal Tunbridge Wells, Kent, TN1 2AB between the hours of 9am and 5pm Monday to Friday (except Thursday 9am to 6.30pm) or 9am and 1.30pm on Saturday.

You have the right to make representations or objections in respect of the Direction. Any such representations or objections must be made in writing to the Head of Planning Services, Town Hall, Tunbridge Wells, Kent TN1 1RS, within 28 days from the 5 March 2012.

It is proposed that the Direction comes into force in relation to the area specified in the Second Schedule to this Notice on 9 April 2012

THE INTERVIEW

Ranking Roger

A NEW musical movement washed over the UK in the late 70s and early 80s. As punk burnt itself out and before the new romantics slotted in their shoulder-pads, there was a window of opportunity and ska took over the scene.

At the forefront of this movement were the Birmingham outfit The Beat, with their charismatic 'toaster' Ranking Roger.

Real name Roger Charlery, the dreadlocked MC still tours with a slightly-amended version of the band that includes his son, Ranking Junior.

In 2005, Junior appeared on The Ordinary Boys smash hit Boys Will Be Boys, prompting a resurgence in ska. And its popularity has been growing, with modern artists incorporating the ska sound into their music.

Roger said: "I truly don't think 2 Tone music was ever given enough time to become too commercialised, like punk was.

"Punk kind of sold out, whereas 2 Tone didn't. The ska theme peaked for a little while and then it went back underground. People sort of said 'Oh well, ska is dead - let's bring in the new romantic era'. It never got over-exposed, so people didn't get bored of it.

"Over the years it has been incorporated into other people's music in the charts and slowly found its way back, so people accept it again.

"They are going back to the original ska stuff to learn what it is all about so they can turn it into the futuristic sound it has become."

The group tour all year round, headlining ska festivals across the UK and Europe, including a visit to the Skabour event in Folkestone.

"It's still really prominent down in Kent," said Roger. "Every time we play down in Margate we get a good crowd, so I guess we do still have a big following in the area.

"It's a positive memory for people because it is largely based on rhythm and blues anyway, and that is where pop music comes from. People can still soak it up quite easily."

Alongside former guitarist and frontman Dave Wakeling, Roger helped pen timeless classics like Mirror In The Bathroom and Ranking Full Stop. Wakeling moved to America and created The American Beat, but rumours of reunions often resurface.

Roger, 52, said: "Everywhere The Beat play, it seems to be alive and kicking, but if ska is alive and kicking I don't know yet.

"Over the last couple of years there has been a big resurgence, but we have just kept on going regardless. People call us a ska band, but we don't call us a ska band because our music is so diverse - we do punk, reggae, soul and

Forget the mirror, The Beat look to the future

Ranking Roger talks to Joe Bill about the popularity of ska music and how the band are enjoying their extensive tour schedule calypso. There are probably only two real ska tunes from The Beat because it opens up a different dimension to our audience."

The group went in at No 6 in the charts in 1979 with their cover version of Smokey Robinson's Tears Of A Clown.

But it is their 1980 top-five hit Mirror In The Bathroom that remains a favourite with both the crowd and Roger himself.

He said: "For me that song is The Beat's sound and that is what we were all about. It might not be the strongest tune, but it is one which represents us best... it is timeless.

"If Mirror In The Bathroom had never come out, and a band released it 20 years in the future, it would probably go down just as well."

The group's fan base is almost as diverse as The Beat's music, with demand for live gigs coming from around the globe. This means members have to stay in top condition to keep up with the shows.

"Towards the end of last year we were getting tired. We gigged all year and only had about 10 days off - it was just about humanly bearable to do that. But now we have had five weeks off we are ready again.

"We have just been to Holland, Belgium, Dubai and Qatar for some gigs to warm up.

"We have learned from our mistakes for the next tour. No matter how long you have been doing it, when you have some time off, it takes two or three gigs to get back into the flow."

But with 25-year-old Ranking Junior, real name Matthew Murphy, on board, The Beat have a youthful spring in their step for the continued resurgence.

Roger said: "He is good for bringing in the younger generation. We get a lot of older heads, but we get a lot of people from 17 upwards and sometimes younger at festivals. They love the music. They love him."

At the height of their fame, The Beat commanded a place on tour with the likes of David Bowie, The Specials and REM, but Roger still has a soft spot for two particular bands.

He said: "Definitely, always, eternally dedicated to The Clash. They were the best people to be on tour with - we did two or three with them. The Police were great, too.

"We hung out with those guys a lot - I learned loads. They were the biggest in their categories and totally different bands but very grounded people, you would be surprised. Sting, Joe Strummer and Mick Jones were and are so grounded. It influenced me because it made me realise that this is the way to be. If you let the fame go to your head, you can't see anything for the clouds. That is very important."

Finally, Roger revealed the origin of his famous moniker:

He said: "I was 12, I started MCing and all the DJs at the time had Ranking in front of their name to differentiate between them and the singer, so I put it in front of my name.

"At school we had to wear uniform, so on the back of my jacket I wrote 'Ranking Roger, peace love and unity'. That was my life ambition to promote it, and I have done ever since."

Jump onboard The Ship for some excellent pub grub with your pint

It has to be said that Herne Bay is a little lacking in good places to eat. Unlike trendy Whitstable five miles down the coast, the streets have few independent restaurants and even the well-known Italian pizza and pasta chains are nowhere to be found.

However, one place you can definitely get a good meal also happens to be one of the oldest buildings in town.

The Ship on the eastern extreme of the seafront has been a pub for hundreds of years.

Its reputation has been up and down over the years, but since it reopened in 2010 under new management it has really upped its game.

The makeover has certainly made a warm and welcoming atmosphere inside.

The bar sells some real ales and has an extensive wine list. Prices are a little steeper than you might find at other pubs, but the drinks are always served well.

On the night we dined, I enjoyed a pint of Timothy Taylor Gold, which happened to be on tap at the time.

The menu on the chalkboard changes each week. It's nothing exotic but tasty pub food served to a high standard.

I started with pâté and a large hunk of bread. My partner went for the soup, which on this occasion was an extremely tasty vegetable.

RESTAURANT REVIEW

For my main I had a steak served with mashed potato. It was nicely cooked and good to see the chef was willing to come out and serve us when the other staff became too busy.

One good thing about the menu at The Ship is that there is normally a good vegetarian option.

On the night we dined, my partner had a veggie spaghetti Bolognese. It may not sound exciting, but it was very tasty and for once I felt I may have made the wrong choice. There was plenty of it, too. My partner was stuffed by the end, so I had no hesitation helping her clear the bowl. On other visits, there has been a nice vegetarian Wellington, while on Sundays a good nut-roast option is available for lunch.

For my dessert I went for the strawberry crème brûlée. To be honest, any kind of crème brûlée will always prove a winner with me. My partner just had a coffee, being stuffed with her main course.

Prices are roughly what you would expect for good pub grub. Starters are about £5, with mains ranging from £8-£15.

It's a nice place to eat, too. In the winter you can watch waves crash against the sea wall in a gale while you tuck into your meal snugly inside. In summer, meanwhile, you can see families soaking up the sun, walking by with the children carrying their plastic buckets and spades.

So if you're looking for a good-quality pub in a good location you'll find The Ship hard to beat and it's nice to think it is carrying on a tradition that has been going so long.

FARMERS' MARKETS

DARTFORD: The market began in November 2005 at the request of Dartford Borough Council and has been running since then. It is held in the pedestrian area of Dartford high street and is open to the public between 10am and 2pm on the third Friday of the month.

EGERTON: This farmers' market has now been trading every Friday from 2pm to 4.30pm for almost five years, with most of the original stall-holders still selling at the market in the Millennium Hall.

MERSHAM: Featuring produce from the immediate area is the market now held at the Farriers Arms, Mersham Forstal, between 2.30pm and 6.30pm on every second and fourth Friday of the month.

MEOPHAM: This farmers' market has been operating since July 2004 in the overflow car-park of the Meopham fitness and tennis centre on the first Sunday of the month from 9am to 12.30pm.

HILDENBOROUGH: Every Tuesday in St John's Church Centre the Hildenborough farmers' market has an average of 20 stalls each week offering a wide range of fresh local produce of high quality at competitive prices.

IWADE: The village-hall farmers' market opened in February 2009; it takes place on the first Sunday of the month from 10am to 1pm, offering seasonal local produce.

Mother's Day: Six of the Best

The Cherry Tree Sittingbourne

Why here...

Under new ownership and recently reopened, this spacious and friendly family restaurant offers fresh home-cooked food, with full carvery every weekend. Very child-friendly and plenty of parking.

On the menu...

Treat Mum to the carvery with turkey, beef and pork, fresh vegetables and all the trimmings. Cost is £7.99 pp and £4.99 per child. A light-bite menu is also available. Mum gets a free glass of wine.

How to book...

Where best to treat Mum? So many choices

FLOWERS are appreciated, chocolates are charming, but do you not think that mothers around the county deserve a little more this year?

Organising a meal out for your mum is high on the agenda in 2012 with so many eateries in Kent offering so much good food.

There are a number of up-and-coming restaurants just itching to be tried out on this celebratory day, while the established bistros hope for another springtime boom day.

Remember to keep it subtle to preserve the surprise. Ask Mother what her favourite meal is, ask where the preferred setting would be, and choose accordingly.

"It is not as easy as all that!" I hear you cry. Well, actually it is! In Kent we are blessed with diverse settings and even more diverse menus.

Take Mum on a stroll through our beautiful woodlands before retiring to the pub for a top meal featuring local game. Skip stones along our beaches before an appetising meal of fresh Whitstable oysters. Dover sole or another of our many Kentish fish dishes.

Or even go for a drive through the rolling hills and open fields of our springtime countryside before settling down to Romney Marsh lamb with locally-sourced vegetables.

Drinks are not exactly hard to come by either as Kent sports its own vineyards as well as Biddenden cider, not to mention Britain's oldest brewery, Shepherd Neame.

And if none of this takes your fancy, try one of Kent's modern city restaurants.

Here are six great venues...

The Acorn Inn Birchington

Why here...

The Acorn Inn is a friendly, family-run pub in the heart of the seaside village of Birchington-on-Sea. Hosts Peter and Cath offer a warm welcome to a pub that has existed since 1748.

On the menu...

Treat your mother to the famous Sunday roast. Its popularity means booking is necessary. Choose from beef, lamb or turkey; one course £7.95, two courses £9.95, three courses £11.95.

How to book...

Acorn Inn, 6 Park Lane,
Birchington CT7 0AW
phone: 01843 841196
Served from midday-4.30pm

London Beach Tenterden

Why here...

The London Beach country hotel, spa and golf club boasts a charming and sophisticated restaurant with a fantastic menu that sticks to the principle of serving only Kentish produce. Just one of the venue's many attractions is the opportunity for diners to look across panoramic views of the beautiful Weald of Kent while enjoying a meal. The venue is easy to find on the A28 Ashford Road and offers ample parking on site.

On the menu...

The London Beach is a wonderful treat for Mother's Day lunch. All produce is fresh and sourced locally wherever possible. The Special Menu is exceptional and offers a range of delicious dishes from expert chefs – all at reasonable prices.

How to book...

The first and last place to take your mum for a special dinner

FRESH, home-made food and a good atmosphere will be the order of the day on Mothering Sunday at the First And Last in Herne Common. With an extensive knowledge of the trade, as well as a top chef in the kitchen, owner David Sullivan is achieving his goal of championing traditional, quality pub meals in a friendly ambience.

He said: "The pub has always been known for its good food because it has always been the same chef, Martyn Beer, pictured bottom left.

"Martyn sets the menus – whatever he wants to cook is what comes out of the kitchen. I don't interfere with the food at all. The menus change when he wants to.

"The chef's knowledge of food and different cuisines has got to be used. It's good having your steak-and-ale pies, but things like the Burmese curry you won't see in many other pubs."

The First And Last is highlighting the importance of quality food ahead of Mother's Day on March 18.

David said: "At least 90 per cent of my produce is local. The vegetables, because we are obviously in the middle of Kent, and I was using a local butcher's shop for a while, but the quality of the meat went down, so I stopped. I am very fussy – I want the best.

"It has to be proper quality at a good price."

The eatery is completed by two stove fires, traditional beams and real ales all adding to the warm and cosy feel. There is also a function room available for big occasions and parties.

And word of the First And Last's philosophy is spreading, with more diners heading to Herne Common for a top meal.

"We average around 90 covers on a Sunday afternoon, which is a lot of food," said David.

"We have 12 permanent staff, who are very good. The food is what the pub is known for and the chef is brilliant. I hope to make it into a pub that when people drive past they think 'Let's go in there'.

"It's the little changes and people are starting to notice."

David has been in charge at the historic watering hole for the past year and is looking to make another success of this, his latest venture.

The 44-year-old has had plenty of experience of knowing what makes a good pub, with five generations and more than 200 years of publican family history behind him.

He said: "I was born in a pub – this is what I do. I have grown up in pubs all over London. My mum and dad got out of the pub game and moved into a flat when I was about 14.

"Three months later, I moved out. I couldn't hack it, I had only ever lived in pubs and there was just no noise in the flat.

"No creaks or groans from the old buildings, so I moved out and back into the pub with my nan and granddad. I've been in pubs ever since."

The First And Last has undergone a mini transformation during the last year, with small changes making a big difference to visitors' experience.

David said: "The pub is now clean, the atmosphere is right, there is new furniture, a bit of upholstery and I have put fresh food back in.

There is nothing frozen other than the ice-creams!

"The locals are enjoying having their pub back and I just want to let other people find out about us."

The First And Last is just outside Herne Bay in the picturesque village of Herne. It is surrounded by green fields and perfect for a meal or a relaxing drink in the sunshine.

However, with its cosy interior and toasty bar area, it is also a great location on dark winter evenings and a nice hot meal.

It has good service and quality food, meaning its reputation as a good pub with an excellent menu has grown substantially during the last 12 months.

So to avoid disappointment, you should book early to make sure of a table on Mother's Day at the First and Last on Sunday, March 18.

KENT ATTRACTIONS

Celebration of rural life Lamb fest

Hadlow College, Tonbridge
Saturday and Sunday,
March 10-11
01732 850551

HADLOW College heralds the arrival of spring with its popular annual lambing weekend. Last year the event attracted more than 10,000 visitors from all over Kent and Sussex, all looking to celebrate the UK's traditional countryside hobbies and pastimes. Outdoor fans will be able to attend lambing-shed talks as well as take tours of Hadlow College's specialist animal-management unit. During the weekend there will be a number of attractions including sheepdog trials, dog-grooming demonstrations and tractor- and trailer-rides as well as countryside sports demonstrations. The Hadlow site is directly off the A26 on the Tonbridge side of Hadlow village. The show will run from 11am to 4pm each day. Ticket prices are £4 for adults, and £10 for a family of two adults and up to three children. Visit www.hadlow.ac.uk for more information.

Lewis Carroll classic brought to the stage Alice In Wonderland

The Avenue Theatre, Sittingbourne
Saturday, April 21
01795 471140
www.avenuetheatre.co.uk

THE Avenue Theatre in Sittingbourne is hosting a new adaptation of the classic children's novel Alice In Wonderland. The Edge Theatre School will bring a lively stage version of Lewis Carroll's famous title to Swale for two showings on Saturday, April 21, at 2pm and 6pm. For those who have never read it or seen the recent film version starring Johnny Depp, the story centres on inquisitive youngster Alice, who falls down a rabbit-hole only to find herself in another world full of adventures. Will Alice ever escape? Will she ever find out what the white rabbit was late for? Classic characters such as the March Hare, the Mad Hatter, the homicidal Queen Of Hearts and the troublesome Cheshire Cat will all be up to their tricks in an entertaining family show. Tickets are priced at £6.

Be inspired by blooms Gardening open days

Godinton House, Ashford
01233 620773
www.godinton-house-gardens.co.uk

GODINTON House has two garden open days, on Sunday, March 25, and Sunday, April 1, in support of the National Gardens Scheme. The Godinton gardens are now open for the season. At this time of year you can enjoy the bones of a garden's design as well as the massed drifts of daffodils in the Wild Garden. There is also the individual perfection of a crocus in the Alpine House. As the gardeners prepare the plants for the new season, visitors will take home some inspiration to get them started on their own gardens.

Walk and talk like animals Theme days

Howletts and Port Lympne Wild Animal Parks
0844 8424647
www.aspinallfoundation.org

TWO themes will dominate events at two of Kent's premier wild animal parks this month. Visitors to Port Lympne, near Hythe, will learn about adaptation in the animal kingdom, with special events, talks and activities. Animal director Adrian Harland said: "Animals are specialists at adjusting to their surroundings. Why do gibbons have such long arms and why do elephants have wrinkly skin?" At Howletts, near Canterbury, March's theme is An Animal Choir. Animal director Neil Spooner said: "Visitors will be able to learn how animals communicate and why they snort, cough or hoot." There will be trails, talks and quiz sheets.

Sweets for you all The Searchers

Hazlitt Arts Centre, Maidstone

Sunday, March 18
www.hazlittartscentre.co.uk

POP-ROCKERS The Searchers are still going strong 50 years after their formation. Next month they bring their skiffle sound to the Hazlitt Arts Centre in Maidstone.

The group were first signed up in the early 60s and belted out their debut hit Sweets For My Sweet, which went to No 1 and was described by John Lennon at the time as "the best record out of Liverpool".

A run of top records followed, including Needles And Pins, Don't Throw Your Love Away and Someday We're Gonna Love Again.

In 1981 the group played before the Queen in the Royal Variety Performance. Phone the box office on 01622 758611 or visit www.hazlittartscentre.co.uk.

Have a right old knees-up Chas Hodges

Sunday, March 18, 7.30pm
www.orchardtheatre.co.uk
01322 220000

CHAS Hodges, best known as one half of the popular cockney duo Chas And Dave, is coming to The Orchard Theatre in Dartford. The pair entertained punters for years with songs such as Gertcha, London Girls and, of course, Rabbit.

In this special one-night performance the geezer will entertain the audience with all the best-loved hits, including The Sideboard Song, Margate, Snooker Loopy and Ain't No Pleasing You.

Special guest Lonnie Donegan Jnr and his band will be paying tribute to his late father and his many hits, such as My Old Man's A Dustman, Does Your Chewing Gum Lose Its Flavour, Battle Of New Orleans and Putting On The Style.

Weddings in the spotlight What a show!

Quex Park, Birchington

Sunday, March 4
www.quexmuseum.org
01843 842168

THE 2012 Quex Spring Wedding Fayre promises to be an event that will inspire all brides-to-be.

An eclectic display of more than 45 exhibits ranging from dresses, cakes, jewellery and photography to a range of wedding cars is available to view.

The wedding and functions room, the Hannah Dining Suite, will be available to view and dedicated wedding consultants will be on hand to assist you in tailoring your most memorable day.

The highlight of the show is a grand prize draw, offering couples the opportunity to win free venue styling. In addition, everyone who registers on the day has the chance to win gift vouchers worth £200.

Entry is free to all and the show is open from 11am to 4pm on Sunday, March 4.

Erosion and Alzheimer's Poignant play

Theatre Royal Margate

Tuesday, March 6, 7.30pm
01227 787 787
www.theatreroyalmargate.com

FOLLOWING a successful premiere in 2011, the play 1 Beach Road is being taken on a UK spring tour, which includes a stop in Margate. This production from the award-winning RedCape Theatre is a tale of friendship, coastal erosion, Alzheimer's, synchronized swimming and trying to turn back the tide. Drawing from true stories of people in Norfolk and from study into Alzheimer's, the play looks at the metaphorical connections between coastal erosion and memory loss. Relentlessly the sea swallows first the road, then the row of bungalows and finally its way to the back door of the bed-and-breakfast at 1 Beach Road, where the inhabitants refuse to budge.

Designers in running for national awards

TWO of kitchen company Krieder's designers have been short-listed for this year's prestigious annual KBB Review Awards, which reflect excellence across the industry.

The final verdict will be given at a ceremony in Birmingham's Metropole Hotel on Monday.

Both designers work out of Krieder's Tunbridge Wells studio in Chapel Place, creating contemporary kitchens for their clients throughout the UK and beyond.

Chris Etheridge is in the final four for Designer Of The Year in the under-£30,000 kitchen category, while Justin Marley is short-listed in the £30,000 - £50,000 group.

Both categories reward the skill of the kitchen designer not only for aesthetic and practical results but also their use of budget, problem-solving and meeting the client's brief.

In selecting the under-

£30,000 short-list, the judges are looking for the way designers have managed to achieve flair and individuality while keeping to reasonable budgets – a genuine skill that is essential for the success of the front-line kitchen retailer.

The judges are particularly interested in where the designer has spent money wisely so as to ensure they successfully exceed customer expectations.

Bars and games rooms boom as more choose to stay home

By Amy Nicholas

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

CELEBRITIES may party at chic clubs, restaurants and premieres, but increasingly the hottest entertainment destination for the rest of us is our own home.

Cinemas, party rooms, bars and games rooms are now considered must-haves in high-end homes. And while most people don't have the budget for such lavish spaces, it doesn't stop us embracing the philosophy that staying in is the new going out and looking for kit to make it possible.

"The world has moved on in terms of the way people use their homes," said designer Tara Bernerd, of Tara Bernerd & Partners. "Of course, those who can afford luxury want entertainment areas – cinema room, games room with a pool table and a 'nightclub' zone so they can effortlessly and instantly enjoy their often quite limited leisure time.

"Most people now regard their homes as little kingdoms, where they can demonstrate their taste, be cocooned and amused when they're alone or with family, or entertain in style when the mood takes them."

Home bars have shed their naff reputation. A built-in bar was a famous and much-mocked fixture in the Trotters' lounge in TV's Only Fools and Horses, but now high-street giants Marks & Spencer and John Lewis both have sophisticated ranges of drinks cabinets and trolleys.

Socialising indoors means you can tailor an occasion exactly to suit you and your guests. This could potentially save you money, not to mention freeing hosts from concerns over drinking and driving.

"Men may be more interested in gadgets, gizmos and toys for a games room, while women are keen to have areas where they can relax and entertain, such as cinema rooms and bar areas," said Bernerd.

Convenience and privacy are motivating factors for those who already have the luxury gyms, pools and spas and see separate entertainment zones as complementary to those facilities. But she points out that many people want multi-functional spaces.

"One of our aims is to ensure these rooms are versatile and have just as much atmosphere and appeal when they are used as intimate, relaxing spaces as when they're used for entertaining groups of friends or for parties," said Bernerd.

The rooms themselves can, of course, be tailored to specific interests.

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

MERCEDES-BENZ liked to call the original B-Class a compact sports tourer, but you felt somebody on high had ordered “Call it what you like, but don’t call it a people carrier or MPV!”.

Except it was just that – tall, boxy and versatile but not particularly nice to look at or drive, particularly if you were paying Mercedes money and expecting to cut a dash.

However, the German premium marque has got it right this time with the second generation car, officially in showrooms this weekend and already generating far more interest than its predecessor ever did.

The new B has more style and handling panache to earn the compact sports tourer tag; incredibly, it’s five centimetres lower and exceptionally aerodynamic while offering even more of the space and versatility of the old 2005-2011 car.

Priced from £21,290, quality and technology is also a major step forward:

“No model change in the history of Mercedes-Benz has ever seen so many new developments introduced in one fell swoop,” according to M-B.

And this is one of those rare occasions when a manufacturer’s hype doesn’t need to be swallowed with a pinch of salt.

Mercs have always been at the top for looking after occupants at crunch time, but the B-Class breaks new ground with a radar-based collision warning system as standard.

This weights up the brakes in anticipation if it detects that the car is too close to the vehicle in front and alerts the possibly distracted driver. The Pre Safe system pioneered on the S-Class range flagship is also offered as an extra, delivering a whole raft of further protection.

The cabin is airy, with excellent headroom and fold flat rear seats for maximum cargo capacity, while four equipment packages are offered for owner customisation: Chrome, Sports, Exclusive and Night – it’s a sexier proposition than last time around.

Practical car buyers are also usually people with an eye on ecology and economy and the B-Class won’t disappoint, with all-new low emission, green powertrains with stop/start for added economy in congested conditions.

There’s a new direct injection turbocharged four-cylinder petrol engine series, a new diesel, six-speed manual gearboxes as standard and even a VW-style dual clutch seven-speed transmission that allows the car to be driven auto or manual, but with manual transmission economy. All wear M-B’s eco-friendly BlueEfficiency branding.

I tried a flagship B200 CDI in smart Sport trim, fitted with the dual-clutch box and loaned courtesy of the Lookers Mercedes-Benz group, which has sites at Maidstone, Tonbridge, Ashford and Canterbury. The gearbox is seamless and impressive, though adds £1,450 to the £24,710 price of the manual version.

‘A’ grade B-Class this time

NEW IMAGE:
The revamped B-Class is a great improvement

”””

... the fact that versatility has to cost this much, but then again, why shouldn't MPV buyers have a premium option?

”””

... there will be enough premium car buyers who will want the everyday image of an MPV... even if it is a good-looking one.

”””

... how Mercedes-Benz has kicked on from the previous car, which now looks a sort of gawky prototype ahead of the classy real deal.

Expect a Swift conversion

By Sam Davison

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

I'VE become a Suzuki convert.

Apart from producing good cut-price off-road-ers, I used to think the Japanese marque produced a lot of dross. A case in point was the Swift supermini – it had none of the elegance of the bird, and Swift it wasn't.

But latter day Swift models have signalled a Suzuki revival: the first new era Swift (2005-2011) resembled the BMW Mini for looks and fun, but was vastly more affordable.

Using admirable 'don't fix it if it ain't broke' thinking, Suzuki has since morphed that car into a slightly bigger second generation model retaining much of its predecessor's styling, but breaking new ground in quality, fit and finish, thereby catching up and surpassing French superminis that used to attract people seeking style and value.

Nowhere is this more evident than in the excellent Swift Sport model, the range flagship at £13,499 and unbeatable in its price class.

It could be even more affordable if Suzuki stripped out some unnecessary extras such as the fancy keyless locking and cruise control and downgraded from climate control to plain air con.

After all, if you're having fun then what's the point of those? It's not as if there haven't been precedents in stripped out, back to basics hot hatchbacks such as the Peugeot Rallye 106 or equivalent Citroen Saxos.

I would draw the line at losing the Swift Sport's alloys though, which make the car look far more expensive than its modest price would suggest.

Inside, the hike in quality on this new generation car is excellent, with supportive sports seats, a well-arranged and durable dashboard, all the Bluetooth/MP3 'toys connectivity' required of a youth-orientated hot hatch, plus a lovely perforated leather sports wheel with audio and cruise controls.

WINNING FORMULA:

The latest version of the Suzuki Swift is surprisingly appealing, converting our reviewer to the brand

But is the Swift Sport only a young person's car? I would argue that its appeal stretches across generations, much like the Mini.

For a start, it is not an out and out hot hatch: the free-revving 136PS (135bhp) 1.6-litre petrol engine will take you to 62mph in under nine seconds, but that qualifies it more as a warm hatch rather than a scorcher like the £22,295. Vauxhall Corsa VXR Nurburging (6.6 Seconds) reviewed elsewhere this week.

It also makes it easier to insure (group 19 – the above Corsa group 34) than you might expect, whilst a crisp six-speed gearbox clinches my theory that Suzuki has set out to create a crowd-pleasing sports model to suit all occasions...and owner profiles.

With the tall top gear engaged the Sport will cruise the motorway happily, but it also means there are a lot of other cogs to play with on more engaging roads, and you'll want to change gear a lot to enjoy blipping the throttle and keeping the revs up.

Pin sharp steering also comes into play, but before the more sober-suited of you turns the page, you would also be impressed with the Sport's ride quality and refinement.

I've criticised some hot hatches for the baggage they bring in terms of poor economy, discomfort and noise for the 90 per cent of traffic conditions we must endure on 'modern' roads, just for the sake of that 10 per cent when you can cut loose a bit. Well, there's none of that with the Sport – it's a crackling little all-rounder that can average more than 40mpg.

The caveats are that it comes only as a three-door – you must look elsewhere in the Swift range (from £10,660) for five-door accessibility – and rear legroom and boot space are average, but it should still make a Suzuki convert out of you, too.

MOTORING NEWS

Grand return for Minivan

STYLE can be practical – that's the argument behind the Mini Clubvan Concept, which also revives the classic 1960s Minivan.

We can expect this concept to go all the way too, since the appeal is obvious for firms, couriers or tradesmen keen to project a premium image while making their business calls.

Vehicle-customisation nuts will be rubbing their hands, too.

Aygo to the extremes

TOYOTA has launched flagship Fire (from £9,595) and ioe (from £9,895) models to complete its revitalised Aygo city car range (from £8,495) now arriving in showrooms.

Apart from a visual makeover the other big Aygo news is that the car's 1.0-litre VVT-i engine now emits less than 100g/km CO2 emissions, thereby escaping road tax and the London congestion charge.

Great value from Chevy

CHEVROLET has put down a marker on '12-plate offers with savings of up to £4,000 across the range, plus the brand's usual five-year/100,000-mile warranty.

The versatile Spark 1.0+ city car is selling for £6,975, slashing £1,500 off the usual price, and there are even savings on the impressive newly-launched Aveo supermini (pictured) – a 1.2 LS costs just £8,995.

Corsa on track with Nurburgring special

1ST DRIVE

By Sam Davison

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

IT'S true that genuine hot hatches are rapidly becoming a pointless exercise.

Young customers they appeal to most would normally struggle to insure the most junior car in the same model range, let alone the hottest and most outrageous.

But that's the point in a way, because while our would-be boy racer knows he has no chance of getting his mitts on the turbo nutter model, short of breaking in and pinching it, he can at least enjoy glamour by association if he buys the 1.2-litre cooking version.

And, whisper it, that's largely why Vauxhall has gone to such pains to ensure that its Corsa supermini is in the buying public's eye by producing a super hot hatch version of its class VXR performance model.

Known as the Nurburgring, it comes with an extra 13PS from the 192PS (190bhp) VXR 1.6-litre turbo engine, plus a lot more in the chassis and handling department, though it will set you back a sobering £3,395 more than the standard VXR.

The enthusiast will see this as a price worth paying though, since the Nurburgring logos on the car are not lazy marketing tat; the car chassis really has been tuned on the famous German 'no holds barred' racetrack.

Checking this to the max on a UK road ought to be beyond the skills and sensibility of any driver, but the car is impressive, not least because it is a useable everyday piece of kit that just happens to corner on rails, to use a cliché.

This has been achieved by Bilstein dampers and new springs, lightweight yet powerful Brembo brakes, lowering the VXR's already miserly ride height and – where a lot of the extra cash goes – a limited-slip differential on the front axle to tame the leap in bhp.

The standard VXR controls its already prodigious power well to make it one of the better hot hatches to live with on mundane miles, but powerful small and light front-wheel drive cars are never far from the clutches of torque steer, where the driver grapples with a bucking steering wheel as the front wheels scramble to apply far too much horsepower to the road.

The Nurburgring's set-up means a potential spitfire of a car becomes a snarling, but controllable, wildcat. It is truly fun to drive, but you also know that it wouldn't hurt to travel several hundred miles in it thanks to real world ride quality and supportive Recaro sports seats, plus a six-speed gearbox for motorway cruising. It's not even particularly noisy at high speeds.

I will be deemed old school though in saying that the interior could do with a splash of 1980s hot hatch colour, with bright braces (seatbelts) and highlights to the wheel and seat trimming.

The big question for Gazzaniga: how do you say 'early doors' in Spanish?

By Fred Atkins

sports@kosmedia.co.uk

PAOLO Gazzaniga, Gillingham's gigantic new 19-year-old keeper is learning a new English word every day according to his manager Andy Hessenthaler, who says the Argentine has every chance of becoming his permanent "numero uno".

Gazzaniga, who signed this summer after being released from Valencia's youth academy, doesn't yet speak enough English to know exactly what his team mates are telling him – there isn't for example a direct Spanish translation for the term "early doors" – but Hessenthaler admitted he was tempted to give him a starting role even before Ross Flitney suffered his knee injury.

"He was getting closer," he said. "Everybody was under pressure and Ross was no exception. (Paolo) was looking bright in training and he's obviously forced his way in with Ross' injury."

Having kept five clean sheets during an impressive pre-season campaign, Gazzaniga was handed his chance when Flitney was hauled off after a first-half horror show at Accrington, which saw the Gills go in 4-1 down at half-time.

Gazzaniga kept a clean sheet as Gillingham rallied to 4-3 in the second half, went up field for a corner in stoppage time and then sprinted back to make a brilliant save as Stanley countered.

There was little he could have done about the goals in the successive 2-1 defeats to Southend and Port Vale and he subsequently shut out Rotherham and Torquay and saved a penalty in the 5-4 thriller with Hereford.

"It was great for him to get his first clean sheet

BIG PRESENCE: Paolo Gazzaniga has been impressing Gills manager Andy Hessenthaler since he signed for the club this summer and I'm quite excited watching him," Hessenthaler said after the Rotherham game.

"Some of his kicking got us on the attack and caused them a lot of problems. We're really pleased with his progression, Ron Hillyard's been doing a lot of work with him."

"He's a little character," Hessenthaler added, which was possibly not the best choice of adjective given that Gazzaniga, at 6'5", is over a foot taller than his manager, but was a testimony to his mental strength.

"He's come over from Spain and Argentina and his family follow him a lot, they watch him on the TV and on the internet when they can and I think there's a real good buzz about the lad," he said.

"It isn't easy for him, coming over here and trying to make a living and get a profession out of being a keeper in England. You've got to give him a lot of credit, especially with him being only 19."

Hessenthaler was asked if the language barrier had ever been a problem.

"Hopefully not on the pitch, but off the pitch we have to explain to him quite a lot what we want him to do," he said. "I think he's learning a new word every day," he added, with the kind of smile that implied it was best not to ask exactly what those words were.

Hessenthaler admitted he didn't know if any of his current squad spoke any Spanish – if any do none of them have made themselves known. Youth team coach Darren Hare is reasonably fluent, but Hessenthaler admits professional tuition could be needed.

"I think it's something we've got to look into actually, maybe we can get somebody in to work with him and get him a bit more English," he said. "On the keeper front obviously communication is really important but as I say he's getting better and we're really pleased with him."

Gillingham have had a number of foreign players in the past couple of decades, though most have come from countries where English is the first language.

One exception was the Malian Mama Sidibe, now with Stoke, who may have known more than he let on.

"He took a little bit of time to get the lingo, I think he was quite clever," Hessenthaler said. "He probably knew a bit more than we thought, especially when he went back to Mali on his international call-ups. We asked him to come back on this day and he said afterwards he didn't understand. I think he was being crafty."

GERRIT KEIZER

ONE of the first and most remarkable foreign imports to play in England, Keizer's professional career began on the Isle of Thanet.

Dutchman Keizer was 20 and a reserve keeper for Ajax when he joined Margate in 1930, having come to the country to improve his English.

Margate were then Arsenal's unofficial nursery club and he was almost immediately signed up by Gunners manager Herbert Chapman.

Keizer made 13 appearances as Arsenal won their first league title, though his erratic style prevented him ever becoming a first-choice and ironically his arrival actually prevented rather than encouraged English clubs to look abroad for talent.

The Ministry of Labour were outraged that Arsenal had employed a foreigner and in 1931 the FA passed a rule that barred foreign players unless they had been resident in Britain for two years.

They were too late to thwart Keizer, who had already been in England long enough to qualify as a resident, but his haphazard goalkeeping saw him fall out of favour with Chapman and he joined Charlton and then QPR.

Keizer's later life makes for a fascinating subtext. He made 302 appearances for Ajax and after World War Two he made repeated flights to London, to borrow kit from his old club for a poverty-stricken Ajax side.

To this day Ajax wear a kit similar to Arsenal, although Keizer got into trouble when he returned from one of his mercy missions and was found with an illegally large amount of foreign currency, earning him six-months in prison.

He later reinvented himself as a greengrocer and became a director at Ajax before his death in 1980. His grandson Peter Keizer, not to be confused with the Dutch international Piet Keizer, became a distinguished artist and sculptor.

"Keizer's law" wasn't abolished until 1978.

BERTRAND BOSSU

STILL only 31, Bossu has been with a dozen professional clubs in the UK in a career remarkable for just how little senior football he's actually played.

Hailing from Calais, he had one of the less strenuous journeys here, but Hayes were the only team he ever made it into double figures for. He made only four appearances for Gillingham, but he did have a fleeting moment of glory when he kept goal as Gillingham knocked Charlton, then in the Premier League, out of the FA Cup in 2004.

Next he went to Torquay on loan, but was sent back after two games, prompting Gills chairman Paul Scally to threaten legal action in a row over wages.

Bossu is now at Harlow.

CHUCK MARTINI

UNSURPRISINGLY Martini isn't his real name. Chuck Moussadik, universally known by his James Bond-friendly nickname, makes Bossu look like a one-club man.

The Moroccan has played for a staggering number of teams, including a stint at Wycombe under Martin O'Neill before fleeting spells with Bromley and Maidstone.

MICHAL CZANNER

THE Slovakian keeper is currently with Tunbridge Wells having been part of the non-league circuit in Kent for a number of seasons.

Once with Tonbridge Angels and part of Maidstone United's Ryman South Division title-winning squad in 2006-07, where he was nicknamed "Ivan the Russian" by his team mates, which may have been a joke, or just a reflection on the standards of geography teaching.

Brickies look to turn over new Leafe after grim week

By Fred Atkins

sports@kosmedia.co.uk

IF Sittingbourne want to get themselves out of danger a win over relegation rivals Whyteleafe at Bourne park this Saturday would be a decent place to start, after two consecutive defeats in Ryman 1 South dropped them to 18th in the table.

After a month without a competitive fixture the Brickies were hammered 5-1 at Crawley Down on Saturday and then beaten 2-0 by Corinthian Casuals at Bourne Park on Tuesday night.

Chairman Andy Spice put on a brave face after Tuesday's defeat, saying: "I think we'll probably be ok," but he admitted the Whyteleafe game could be crucial.

"They're in the same sort of position as us so obviously it's quite a key match," Spice said.

Asked if he was worried by their league position, Spice said: "I'm always worried about everything, that's my job!"

Sittingbourne are hoping to bring in a couple of new faces in time for Saturday's game, but with the paperwork still to be completed Spice wasn't about to tempt fate by naming any names.

At Crawley Down the Brickies struggled without Cedric Abraham and were 2-0 down early on. Skipper Anthony Hogg pulled one back after 16 minutes, but Sittingbourne conceded again eight minutes later and shipped two more in the second half.

FIGHT-BACK: Hicham Akhazzan emerged with some credit after a difficult week for Sittingbourne to see the Brickies lose, despite what Spice felt was an improved display.

"Cedric had his first game back for a while and did ok," he said. "Hicham (Akhazzan) did well and to be fair it was only the second games the lads had in a while and they struggled on Saturday, but on Tuesday they improved."

Whyteleafe are bottom of the table and when the two sides met back in November they controversially clawed back a two-goal deficit.

Akhazzan had given Sittingbourne the lead on the hour and when Joe Goldsmith scored from the penalty spot with a quarter of an hour to go the points seemed to be safe, but on 89 minutes Whyteleafe failed to return the ball to the Brickies after an injury to Goldsmith and they scored from the resulting corner before snatching a late equaliser.

RUGBY

Morale high as Islanders seek revenge in relegation battle

THERE'S another vital game for Sheppey this Saturday, as they head up the M2 motorway to relegation rivals Park House in Bromley, looking to atone for the 10-16 loss they suffered to the same opponents at The Ditch earlier this season.

The Islanders are at full strength for the trip, but coach Pete Olliver has warned his squad to heed the lessons of that defeat.

"In Kent 1 you'll play some sides who just fold, but in this league (London 3 South East) you have to play for 80 minutes," he said, winning at the memory of the way his side squandered a 10-0 lead. "We'll be telling them not to take their foot off the gas this time."

"They're another Kent side so everybody knows this is a game we've got to win."

Sheppey have a full squad to choose from for the game and although their situation is precarious, despite a much-needed win 11-0 over Bromley when they last played in the league a fortnight ago, morale is high in the camp.

"We're raring to go," Olliver said.

MUST WIN: Squad's at full strength

"We think they're pretty robust in the forward line, so I take it that they'll try to put it up their jumper."

"We're going to have to run them around and knacker them out really."

In Kent 1 Sittingbourne, who lost 28-42 at home to HSBC last week, are at home to Beccehamian.

Woodstock try not to blink in race for runners-up slot

WOODSTOCK Sports travel to Tunbridge Wells on Saturday still in with a chance of finishing in second place in the Kent League Premier Division.

While leaders Herne Bay look to be all but uncatchable with a 13-point lead over their nearest rivals, Woodstock, currently fifth, have a realistic chance of claiming the runners-up spot, especially after beating second-place Erith Town 2-0 at home last week.

After a goalless first half in which keeper Rob Welling shut Erith out, Woodstock took the lead on 68 minutes when sub Michael Green played in James McDonald, who chipped the keeper to make it 1-0.

Woodstock had to defend desperately at times but eventually grabbed a second goal when McDonald brilliantly turned in Josh Davidson's cross six minutes from time.

Rob Welling is a doubt for the trip to Tunbridge Wells after he was forced off in the first half against Erith and Ricky Freeman remains suspended, but player-manager Ben Taylor is available after completing a three-game suspension.

BID: Can they build on last week?

Tunbridge Wells had hoped to challenge for a top three finish, but after a tricky fortnight they have seen their hopes fade, slipping to eighth, after a run which saw them pick up just one point from a possible nine.

Successive 2-0 defeats to Erith Town and VCD Athletic at their Culverden Stadium were followed by a 1-1 draw at Erith & Belvedere last week.

NON-LEAGUE FOOTBALL FOCUS

WITH FRED ATKINS

The comic on the terraces...

“THERE are times when being in the main stand at a football ground is a bit like being trapped in the audience when it's open mic night at the world's worst stand-up comedy club.

The term wag has now evolved into a word that describes the kind of day-glo orange woman who spends a couple of years locked in a disastrous marriage to a philandering professional footballer, but it used to refer to a certain kind of football fan.

Emboldened by the safety of numbers, the "wag" traditionally regards the rest of the main stand as his audience and at a certain point in every game performs a kind of comedy karaoke act.

Just as Fred Dinenage genuinely seems to feel he's a reincarnation of Johnny Carson every time he delivers a punch line that's been carved in lead, so the wag rises to his feet to deliver what, in his own mind at least, is a devastating one-liner.

The non-league ground remains his happiest hunting ground, because there's seldom enough crowd noise to drown him out.

Wherever Maidstone have played in the past three decades, a handful of wags have faithfully treated the rest of us to the same old gags, regarding them as classics.

An opposition player uses his arms? Response: "You've got more arms than the Taliban!", a nice bit of satire that can be updated for whichever conflict happens to be tearing apart some far flung corner of the globe at the time (eg Iraq, Biafra or Sheerness High Street).

When an opposition player, "goes down easily," to use the apologists' term for a piece of Gareth Bale style swallow-diving, the wag habitually lets rip with: "You've got more dives than Jacques Cousteau."

He turns for a moment to see if everyone's understood his comic genius and then sits down again, happy he's added a bit of sunshine to everyone's lives. This is known as "Mark Lawrenson Syndrome".

Every now and again someone bucks the trend by saying something genuinely amusing, and while half a dozen laughs over 30 years suggests the acts need some work, this is at least a success rate the producers of Match of the Day 2, with their carcinogenically unamusing pre-match graphics, can only dream of emulating.

Cricket crowds usually have a better script. You're unlikely to hear anyone match: "Tufnell can I borrow your brain? I'm building an idiot," while standing on the touchline at a Ryman League match.

At a non-league ground however, you can hear the sledging. Lloyd Hume's response to being called "fatty" during a match, presumably not for the first time, was "I'm not fat, I'm rich".

Better still (I thought) was Ramsgate's Jim Ward, when an opposition player went down injured while his physio was already occupied. "We'll take a look at it," Ward quipped, pointing to the player's injured foot. "We'll take it off, mind."
